20 Millions Public Works Bill for D. C. Passes Senate

Goes to House Facing Delay on Blanton's Opposition.

Committee Acts Next Wednesday

$2,000,000 to Buy Park Land; Building Fund $18,000,000.

The Senate yesterday passed the District $20,000,000 public works bill and sent the measure to the House where it seems likely to meet with delay and an uncertain end.

Passage of the bill by the Senate required about three minutes which were occupied by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, District Committee chairman, in explanation of its provisions.

The bill provides $2,000,000 for the purchase of park lands, under the Capper-Cramton act, by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and sets forth a building program on which it is planned to expend the remaining $18,000,000 which, it is expected, will be advanced by the Public Works Administration under the law permitting advances to States and municipalities.

The law provides that for public projects approved by the PWA advances may be made. Seventy per cent of the advance is to be repaid and 30 per cent is an outright gift such as has been made to various States and municipalities under the law.

Interest Provision.

The bill provides that no interest shall be paid by the District for three years on the amount due the PWA. The unpaid balance is to bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent per year thereafter. The District Commissionres told the District Committee that they contemplated providing for a first payment of $1,300,000 in the next annual District estimates submitted to Congress.

As passed by the Senate the measure leaves to the discretion of the Commissioners what portion of the annual repayments shall go to repay appropriations made under the Capper-Cramton park act and what shall be repaid to the PWA. Corporation Counsel Prettyman told the committee the Commissioners undoubtedly would repay the interest bearing PWA debt first. This would save the District $4,000,000 in interest, he said.

Objections of representatives of the park commission to this program were understood to have given way before assurances by Senator King and others that such a repayment arrangement would

Bremer Kidnap Cash Is Found

Illinois Liquor Dealer Had $2,665 Ransom Money, Police Reveal.

Chicago, April 27 (AP).—Federal authorities today disclosed the recovery of $2,665 of the $200,000 paid two months ago for the release of Edward Bremer, wealthy St. Paul brewer kidnap victim, and declared it an important clew.

The money, in $5 and $10 denominations, was found in the pockets of William E. Vidler, 34, a former convict who had been an automobile dealer, and, since repeal, a liquor dealer. Police said he served three years, 1920 through 1923, in the Illinois State Penitentiary for automobile theft.

Vidler was arrested while making wagers on horse races. Police said such gambling had become a common manner for criminals to exchange counterfeit, stolen or otherwise "hot" money for untainted currency.

It was the first of the fortune in currency recovered since Bremer's release. Vidler was held incommunicado by the office of Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the U. S. Division of Investigation here.

Although Federal authorities have declared they knew the identity of Bremer's kidnapers, Purvis said he hoped to gain valuable information from Vidler.

Purvis said he believed Vidler had been in communication recently with members of John Dillinger's gang. He did not explain the connection.

"I Am a Scoundrel," Placard on Hitler Foe

Bad Salzufen, Germany, April 27 (AP).—A physician named Engeland was arrested today for making a derogatory remark about Chancellor Hitler and led through the streets with a placard around his neck inscribed, "I am a scoundrel; I have insulted the leader."

Cannon Jury Acquits Bishop, Woman Aid

Bishop James Cannon, jr., left, leaving the District courthouse after his acquittal yesterday. Mrs. Cannon is beside him and Miss Ada Burroughs, codefendant, at right.

By Frank Getty.

Five years of investigation and litigation of charges and countercharges of political intrigue and religious prejudice, and of revived bitterness of the 1928 Presidential campaign, ended abruptly for Bishop James Cannon, jr., yesterday afternoon when a Supreme Court jury found him not guilty of conspiracy to violate the Federal corrupt practices act.

Acquitted with the bishop, after the jury of 11 men and 1 woman had deliberated less than 2½ hours, was his former secretary, Miss Ada L. Burroughs.

There was only the mildest of demonstrations in the courtroom

Track News Place Raided; Four Seized

Police Claim Heavy Blow at Gambling; 60 Resorts Served by Wires.

Washington police yesterday struck at the heart of gambling in the District when they raided an alleged source of racing information which is said to serve more than 60 gambling houses in the District and vicinity.

Lieut. George M. Little, head of the special vice squad which has been working to drive out local gambling places, assisted by Sergt. G. P. Deyoe and three policemen, descended on an establishment known as the District News Co., in the 800 block of I street northwest.

They took into custody four telegraph operators who gave their names as Anthony Letina, 44, of the 5400 block of Illinois avenue northwest; Melvin J. Grooms, 28, of the 600 block of Farragut street northwest; Martin J. Madden, 30, of the 700 block of I street northwest, and James T. Clarke, 39, of Baltimore. The men were taken to police headquarters and charged with conspiracy to violate the gambling laws. They were released on a cash bond of $1,000 each.

Police said that similar places are operated throughout the country by a so-called news service that disseminates race results direct from the principal tracks.

Information is distributed by direct wire from the tracks so fast that it is the next best thing to being present at the race, it was said. Agents stationed at the tracks send information to such central points dealing with horses, riders, changes in weights, odds, changes of track conditions and other information.

Equipment, including a switchboard, racing chart, telegraph receiver, transmitting microphone, and a file of customers, was confiscated and taken to the United States marshal's office.

Lieut. Little said he and his assistants had been working on a tip since March. Unless another similar headquarters exists in the District, yesterday's raid should deal a serious blow to bookmaking in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia, Lieut Little said.

The raid was the first ever made here on such a headquarters point.

Dillinger Aid Flees Ambush Of 100 Guns

"Baby Face" Hides Out With Indian; Escapes in Stolen Auto.

St. Paul, April 27 (AP).—Another Dillinger gangster, diminutive, dangerous George "Baby Face" Nelson slipped unnoticed and unhurt past 100 waiting guns today as the forces of law met repeated obstacles in the greatest criminal hunt of the decade.

Late today, however, officers were sent to Squirrel Lake, near Eagle River, Wis., where it was reported they had recovered the car stolen by Nelson, and were closing in on the fugitive.

While John Dillinger and his outlaws were reported at half a dozen points over the map, the focal point of the manhunt swept back into the north Wisconsin woods, where the gang Sunday fought off pursuers, fled, and left two dead and four wounded at the scene of two gun battles near Mercer, Wis.

Hiding in Indian's Hut.

Nelson's flight today disclosed that he had been hiding for two days in the shack of an Indian, Ollie Catfish, near Lac du Flambeau, and only 40 miles from the scene of Sunday night's gun battles at Mercer.

Federal agents were especially anxious to catch Nelson, a 5-foot gangster with a face like a cupid and a record for killing and bank robbery, because it was he who, they said, killed one of their number, Agent W. Carter Baum, of Washington, in one of the Mercer gun battles.

After two days as the unwelcome guest in Ollie Catfish's shack, Nelson walked up to Adolph Goetz, a rural mail carrier who was fishing in a lake near Lac Du Flambeau, pushed a gun into his ribs, and asked, "Is that your car up on the hill?"

Goetz admitted ownership, hand-

Monkey Gland Specialist, 64, Weds Austrian Beauty of 20

Bucharest, Rumania, April 27 (AP).—Prof. Serge Voronoff, champion of monkey-gland rejuvenation, now 64, and Fraulein Gertrude Schwaetz, auburn-haired beauty, 20 years old, were married here last night.

The bride is the cousin of Mme. Magda Lupescu, King Carol's friend, who introduced her to the professor. She is the daughter of an architect in the service of the Vienna Municipal Council, and her mother is the sister of Mme. Lupescu's mother.

Positive information of the engagement was received only this evening. The couple left on a honeymoon trip to Paris, where King Carol and his favorite, Mme. Lupescu, spent many happy days.

It was first reported that the professor and Fraulein Schwaetz would go to Nice to be wed, but the marriage took place at the Austrian consulate here because the bride is an Austrian citizen.

During the professor's visits to Bucharest, he and Fraulein Schwaetz were often seen in the company of the red-haired Mme. Lupescu. King Carol also has received Voronoff and bestowed a decoration on him. This honor was the Rumanian Order of Specialist.

Mme. Lupescu did not attend the wedding. Through the quiet ceremony, Voronoff, a Viennese, stole a march on the Rumanian public, but Rumanians think that "he who laughs last laughs best" because the news featuring the doctor's age and specialty spread rapidly.

Dr. Voronoff participated in several operations here and gave a series of lectures before the matrimonial object of his visit was revealed.

Police Guard Shot Woman From Thugs

Mysterious Stranger Is Sought in Furtive Hospital Visit.

Nurse Takes Number of Auto; Murder Try Laid to Gang.

Police fears of a further attempt by gangsters on the life of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine, admitted sweetheart of William Benjamin Phillips, slain Washington gangster, who lies critically wounded from a bullet fired early Thursday, may have been partially confirmed yesterday when a suspicious man drove up to the Upper Darby (Pa.) hospital.

A large, expensive automobile bearing a New York license, police said, parked at the Delaware County Hospital late yesterday. The lone occupant said he was sent by the Philadelphia Police Department to see "a patient." A nurse became suspicious and took the tag number, but before she could summon authorities the man slipped out of the hospital and sped away. Police broadcast a lookout for a sleek black-haired man wearing a purple shirt.

A heavy police guard was placed around the bedside, but the wounded woman said: "It's no use to save me. They'll get me anyway—even if they have to come in here and do it."

Even Chance to Recover.

After a second blood transfusion yesterday, physicians said Mrs. Fontaine had an even chance to recover from the attack police believe was inspired by fears of the Phillips gang she would reveal their hideout and activities.

Meantime authorities were trying to track down not only the two men originally implicated, but a woman who is thought to have stood guard over Mrs. Fontaine after she was spirited away from Washington. The trio are believed to be members of a large hi-jacking gang which has been operating between North Carolina and Philadelphia, robbing thousands of dollars worth of cigarettes and silk hose.

Questioned briefly by Washington and Pennsylvania police, she is said to have confirmed statements made Thursday concerning her assailants. Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis and Floyd Truscott, of Washington, spent more than an hour last night looking over the rogues gallery in Philadelphia.

They declined to state whether they had recognized any gangsters as members of the hi-jacking confederates of Phillips, who was killed by Policeman John A. Caton at Adams Mill road and Ontario place April 12.

Pennsylvania authorities are looking for a Philadelphian, in whose name the license on a blood-stained car found at the time of the shooting in front of Mrs. Fontaine's apartment was registered. Police said the man has a long criminal record.

Woman Under Guard.

Authorities said she might have been dragged to the car after being shot in bed. The gangsters are thought to have become frightened and fled on foot at that point, abandoning the original plan to remove her from the scene of the shooting. A loaded revolver and shotgun, neither of which had been fired re-

Town Defies NRA; Probe Under Way

Johnson Sends 2 Aids to Sift Challenge of Authority.

Merchants Spurn Their Emblems After Mill Loses Eagle.

Defiance of NRA by 56 merchants of Harriman, Tenn., in protest against removal of a Blue Eagle from the town's largest mill yesterday caused Gen. Hugh S. Johnson to order an investigation.

The recovery administrator announced he was sending two personal representatives to Harriman and that until he received their report he would withhold comment on a sharp telegram from the Tennessee business men announcing surrender of their own Eagles.

Johnson declined to reveal the identity of the investigators. It was reported, however, that R. W. Lea, aid to the administrator, was one of those chosen.

A "council of war" between Johnson and other ranking NRA officials preceded announcement of the confidential inquiry. While officials were reticent, they intimated the Harriman issue might prove a major test of the power of NRA to revoke insignias.

Telegram Made Public.

The group telegram which brought the situation to a crisis, read:

"We, the undersigned business and professional men of Harriman, have taken down our Blue Eagle emblems as a portest against your forcible removal of the same from the Harriman Hosiery Mills.

"That mill is our principal payroll and we are largely dependent upon its successful operation. This effort is in behalf of the entire community, whether they be union or nonunion, employed or unemployed, and it is an indication of our faith and belief that said mill is operated and managed in strict obedience of the laws and codes.

"If the mill is not permitted to operate under the NRA emblem, advise us where to send ours."

Johnson precipitated the controversy last week when he ordered the hosiery mill to surrender its eagle and to refrain from using the emblem either at the plant or in advertising.

Requested by Board.

He acted on complaint of the National Labor Board that the mill infringed the right of its employes to bargain collectively through their own representatives. The compliance board concurred in the request of the labor group.

In addition, the labor board recommended that the Department of Justice proceed against the mill for alleged violation of the collective bargaining guarantee contained in the National industrial recovery act.

At one point in the labor board's consideration of the case, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New

Chandler, W. & M. Head, Gravely Ill

Norfolk, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, president of the College of William and Mary, tonight was reported in a "very serious" condition at the Protestant Hospital, where he has been a patient for several weeks. He is suffering from a kidney disorder.

The rites of the Episcopal Church were administered today by the Very Rev. Dean H. Dobson Peacock, rector of Christ Church. Dr. Chandler was in a semiconscious condition.

Dr. Chandler came here in broken health, and after a short stay at the hospital went to Virginia Beach for a rest cure. He had a relapse and was sent back to the hospital. He has been president of the college since 1912.

Administration Offers 30 to 70 Monetization To Silver Advocates

Proposal Seeks to Avoid Immediate Permanent Legislation.

President Would Control Purchases

Steagall, House Group's Chairman, Indicates Support.

By Robert C. Albright.

Monetization of silver on a 30 per cent ratio with gold yesterday was held out to Congressional white metal blocs in a voluntary White House gesture to head off silver legislation.

The proposal was made by the President to a group of five members of the House Banking Committee who called at the White House to discuss the Goldsborough monetary bill and its silver-purchase amendment.

Though the 30-70 ratio had been broached many times before, banking committee members left Mr. Roosevelt with the distinct impression the President was willing to go this far under his present powers, if Congress enacted no mandatory measure.

Opposes Purchase Plan.

The President was emphatic in saying he did not want the Goldsborough bill, which would set up a permanent monetary authority, and he did not want the compulsory silver-purchase amendment, at least not at this time.

A trifle awed, the committee members were reluctant to comment on the plan, but tall, white-haired Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, Democratic leader of the Congressional inflation forces, was quick to declare the proposal was "safe" because "the President can not purchase that much silver."

Chairman Henry B. Steagall, who described himself as "a silver man" led the little delegation to see the President.

In the group were Representatives T. Alan Goldsborough, of Maryland; Jeff Busby, of Mississippi; Frank Hancock, of North Carolina, and O. H. Cross, of Texas, all Democrats.

President's Plan.

The President is said to have pointed out that 12 per cent of the metallic money base now is silver, and the remaining 88 per cent gold.

During the McKinley Administration, he reminded House members, this ratio crept up to about 22 per cent silver and 78 per cent gold.

He said he no objection to increasing this ratio of silver to gold, by gradual purchases and long term

Brain Trust Doctors Quacks to Mencken

One Thing in Common, He Says—Their Huge Bills!

Baltimore, April 27 (AP).—H. L. Mencken, author and critic, tonight called on "The Brethren of the Brain Trust" to "begone in peace before the country rises against you."

Speaking over a Nation-wide hookup, he concluded with these words:

"Go back to your old job while the going is good.

"Go back to teaching sophomores to be ashamed of their fathers. If you go on much longer trying a new sure cure every day on poor old Uncle Sam, and sending in a bill for 100 million dollars with every one, you may wake up some morning and find the country howling for you hide.

"And when that time comes, you may discover that both ends of Pennsylvania avenue have slid from under you, and you are left to face some very loud music all alone."

His final words, he said, were "what the pastors call a message, spelling it with a capital M."

"This message is not addressed to the taxpayer. He has begun to

Restrictions In Securities Bill Relaxed

House Mining Bloc Wins First Round in Fight on Flotation Rules.

A strong House mining bloc yesterday won its first bout with the Administration for liberalization of the securities act of 1933, when the Federal Trade Commission revised its regulations, easing restrictions against flotation of small security issues.

The move followed a long round of negotiations with Representatives of Western mining States, who complained that stringent security act administration has stifled mine financing throughout the West.

While yesterday's modification of security act regulations in no way affects provisions of the act itself, negotiations are under way with Federal Trade Commissioner James M. Landis looking to a legislative curb on drastic penal and liability sections of the act, Representative James G. Scrugham (Democrat), Nevada, leader of the mining bloc, announced last night.

Exemptions Up to $100,000.

Regulatory changes by the Federal Trade Commission yesterday, providing broad exemptions for security issues of $100,000 and under, are designed primarily to accommodate the highly speculative mining industry, but it was explained that all small industrial enterprises would benefit.

Meanwhile, the fight for modification of the act itself as applied to all industry was carried to the White House by Senator Hamilton F. Kean (Republican), New Jersey. He pointed out to the President that fear of preseht restrictive security act provisions is preventing a normal flow of capital.

"Business will be ready to go ahead when the securities act is amended," he said, expressing a belief that the President favored some modification of the act.

The relaxation of security act regulations voted yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission virtually exempted all stock issues of $30,000 and under from any restrictions under the act.

It was said this would relieve many promoters of small mining en-

Presidential Tariff Power Check Slated

Opposition to Control in Single Person Is Mounting Fast.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although the belief is general the Senate will approve President Roosevelt's reciprocal tariff bill, it became apparent yesterday that a thorny path is ahead of that measure. Before a final vote is taken it is the belief that some kind of concession may have to be made providing for hearings on proposed changes in duties.

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday completed hearing advocates of the bill—members of the Administration. Hearing of opponents will start on Monday. It will be close to the middle of May before the bill reaches the Senate floor, and Republicans predict that the debate will be lengthy.

Incidentally, it now appears that an adjournment of Congress by May 15—the date set some time ago by Administration spokesmen—is out of the question. A safer prediction at this time for adjournment would seem to be early in June.

In all events, the Senate Republicans indicated they regard the reciprocal tariff bill as having the makings of a good political issue.

One or two Republican leaders privately have conceded it would be a shame if the bill were defeated. They believe its administration will rebound to their advantage, irrespective of what is done under it.

Would Make Enemies.

Their point is that the President can not reduce tariffs on any commodity without making enemies of a goodly number of those making or dealing in the commodity.

Led by Senator David A. Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, the Senate Republicans are centering their efforts on getting the bill amended to provide that public hearings should be held by the Tariff Commission before the President makes changes in any tariff duty.

The Administration spokesmen appearing before the Finance Committee have seriously objected to that proposal. They contend that

Green Reports Jobless Ranks Cut by Half Million in March

Employment in industry and agriculture gained more than 560,000 in March, over February but was still under that of last fall, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, estimated yesterday.

Business activity in March, he said, was 9 per cent over the level of last October, while employment was considerably greater than in October. In the manufacturing industry, he said, production increased 7.9 per cent in March over last October, while employment in manufacturing rose only 4.1 per cent.

"Clearly the effort to put men back to work in industry has slackened," he said, "and employers are more interested in increasing workers' productivity than in creating jobs."

Green estimated the total unemployed in March at 10,905,000, as compared with the 10,122,000 last October and 13,689,000 last March.

Trade union reports, Green said, show a falling off in unemployment during the first part of April, in spite of layoffs from the CWA. The unions reported unemployment of 20.8 per cent of their membership in April, as compared with 21.3 per cent in March.

Green cited relief figures to show that "no progress whatever is being made in eliminating destitution."

"We still have 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 families who are wholly dependent on public funds," he said. "Have employers any justification for resisting a decrease in work hours while these millions must be supported by the public and millions more are denied the chance to work?"

Eastman Kept Another Year

Rail Coordinator's Work Wins Commendation of President.

Joseph B. Eastman, mild mannered exponent of Government control of the Nation's railroads, will be continued in office as Federal coordinator of transportation for another year after June 18, it was announced yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Disclosing his intentions to issue the necessary proclamation extending the functions of the coordinator in accordance with the emergency railway transportation act of 1933, the President repeated his gratification over Thursday's settlement of the railway wage dispute.

The act, adopted by Congress last June, created the office of coordinator for one year with provision that the President might extend it another year.

Congress gave the coordinator broad powers over the railroads with the view to eliminating waste and duplicating facilities. Labor sections of the act, however, guarding against displacement of workers, have transformed him more from a "doer of deeds into a prober of possibilities," he has observed.

"I'm going right on with the work I'm now doing," Mr. Eastman said, referring to the detailed studies his office has been preparing on such questions as pooling of cars, unification of termnals and improving service.

Although for years the chief dissenter of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in accordance with views once termed "radical," Mr. Eastman has functioned in complete harmony with the industry.

Court Summons Nailed On Barrymore Door

White Plains, N. Y., April 27 (U.P.).—A summons is to be nailed to the door of Ethel Barrymore's home at Mamaroneck, the Supreme Court ordered today.

The case against the actress involves clothing purchases in England and a process server has been unable to find her home in six visits.

France, Britain Warn Germany To Pay Debts

Moratorium Will Not Be Granted, Powers Tell Von Neurath.

Berlin, April 27 (AP).—French and British warnings against any German plan to postpone payments on the Dawes and Young loans startled the German foreign office today as representatives of foreign bondholders conferred with Reichsbank officials regarding service on medium and long term German obligations.

The British Ambassador told Foreign Minister von Neurath that a "grave view" would be taken of any moratorium on the postwar Dawes and Young loans, and the French envoy made similar representations.

The American Embassy, however, said no instructions had been received from Washington, although Americans hold more of these obligations than any other nation.

A German foreign office spokesman said the British and French communications were given due attention, and called them in keeping with previous efforts of the two countries to protect "their preferential treatment."

Bondholders Pave Way.

American, British, French, Dutch and Swiss bondholders' agents, under the chairmanship of Leon Fraser, American president of the Bank for International Settlements, conducted a brief preliminary discussion this afternoon and appointed two sub-committees to deal with technical matters. Deliberations were scheduled to be resumed at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

The Dawes and Young loans of 1924 and 1930 have no technical relation with the immediate problem of obtaining larger repayments on the medium and long term issues, but experts believed they would nevertheless play an important role in the current proceedings.

Germany, reliable sources indicated, may indicate that exceptions for so-called "privileged" loans can no longer be made.

In this connection the Frankfurter Zeitung's financial expert said: "It is being generally realized that granting a full moratorium for debt transfers is necessary; Germany, to her regret, will not be able even to omit from the moratorium the Dawes and Young loans, hitherto excepted."

Payment to Be Urged.

Other quarters pointed out, however, that these two loans can hardly be affected by decisions of the present conference, since a change in their service would mean prejudicing of a large group of German private creditors.

While representatives of foreign creditors remained noncommittal, their reaction seemed to indicate a firm stand against a complete transfer moratorium.

In answer to German officials' complaints that lessened exports make transfers—that is, the building up of sufficient credit in other countries to meet international obligations—impossible, the creditors' agents, it is understood, will point out that Germany, before she can hope to sell more merchandise, must take definite steps to create conditions here which will bring about "a more sympathetic attitude" abroad.

Bill to Assist Check on Rum Sales Passed

Municipal Tax Stamp Measure Goes to Roosevelt.

A municipal tax stamp must be affixed to all containers of liquor sold in the District under provisions of a bill passed by the Senate yesterday and sent to the President for signature. The bill had been passed by the House.

The measure does not change the existing local liquor taxes, but was recommended by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the District Commissioners to insure payment of taxes. Relatively large amounts of taxes were escaping the District treasury, it was feared because of the difficulty of making an accurate check on dealer's supplies and sales.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the beverage board, reported it had collected $584,281.52 in license fees since sale of liquor was legalized. Taxes amounted to $105,779.36, Mr. Offutt said.

The board has issued 1,417 licenses, of which 229 have been solicitor's licenses and six temporary permits.

Under the tax law passed yesterday dealers must affix municipal tax stamps to bottles as they do Federal revenue stamps.

High Liquor

Man Who Drank 3 Pints Fined $33.33 Each.

Charles Pinkert, 27, was assessed $3.3 per pint in Police Court yesterday on three pints of whisky he had consumed Thursday night.

Arrested early yesterday morning in the 1700 block of Wisconsin avenue, Pinkert, who lives at 2319 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was booked at the Seventh Precinct on charges of drunk and disordrly. P. W. S. Mason, the arresting officer, testified Pinkert had annoyed several women by following them to their homes.

Pinkert testified that he remembered nothing after drinking the three pints.

Judge Isaac R. Hitt fined him $100 on the drunk charge.

Politics and People

By Elliott Thurston

President Roosevelt said yesterday that the Administration hopes to have some announcement to make in the next two or three days on a program to stimulate housing repair and construction. The Attorney General is studying methods of providing stimulation through PWA, on a basis of having the Government "insure" part of the risks to be borne by private agencies which supply the capital or undertake the work. Mr. Roosevelt expressed the hope that no new legislation would be needed.

Plans to start a house repair and building program have been pondered by many Government departments ever since the depression began. Doing something about housing has been like the weather—everybody has talked about it. Nobody has done anything constructive about it.

What appears to be in view now is a much discussed plan before the National Emergency Council, of which Frank C. Walker is executive director. As far as its still shadowy outlines have been disclosed, this calls for a crusade. The public would be exhorted to renovize or to build new homes. Builders, labor, the railroad, everybody concerned, would be urged to a public-spirited campaign. Banks would be asked to lend liberally, labor to cut its wages, builders, contractors and industry supplying materials to reduce costs. So much of the crusade spirit enshrouds the plan that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has been suggested as chief promotor to rally the country to the cause.

In order to spur the hesitant, the Governmnent would "insure the risk." Some estimates are that $1,500,000,000 could be spent for home "modernization" by the end of this year, if the campaign is launched soon. NRA experts have estimated that there is an urgent need for new housing to accommodate 800,000 families, that upwards of 2,500,000 houses should be torn down and replaced at a cost running into many billions of dollars, to say nothing of a theoretical normal annual need of 400,000 new homes.

The importance of reviving construction is undisputed. Avalanches of statistics are available, all proving the enormous accumulated demand for construction. The F. W. Dodge Corporation, long a recognized authority on the subject, has reported that the value of all construction in the 37 States where it gathers the figures amounted to $1,255,700,000 in 1933, compared with yearly averages of more than $6,000,000,000 from 1925 to 1928, both inclusive. Even in 1930 the total was above $4,500,000,000. It was more than $3,000,000,000 in 1931. Since then, despite public works programs, there has been increasing stagnation.

It has been repeatedly emphasized by public officials that the bulk of unemployment is in the heavy industries, and that the great outpouring of public relief funds has revived the consumption goods industries, but not heavy industries. How to stimulate them and so create reemployment where its incidence is greatest, has long been recognized as one of the central problems to be solved. The necessity for reviving construction is only another way of stating the problem.

* * * *

The question, however, is how to revive construction. PWA has been able to make scarcely more than a dent. Several hundred millions of dollars have been from time to time allocated to slum clearance, to various agencies with imposing names, such as the Public Works Emergency Housing Corporation. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation has obtained special funds for remodeling, repairs, etc., though the money has been available only where mortgages are in distress. The point is that efforts to date have amounted to very little. Clearly, if there is to be a return to the levels of the '20's, it is a question of getting several billions of dollars into construction of all kinds. The load is one which only private capital ever has carried. For the Government to shoulder it would be out of the question, short of state capitalism.

In approaching the problem again at this time, the Administration is manifestly seeking to get private capital to assume the task. The Government's contribution is to be limited to the still obscure insurance risk provisions, which are estimated to require not more than $50,000,000 to $100,000,000.

What puzzles many observers, however, is the failure so far to make release of private capital a primary part of the program. Here again, amendment of the securities act so that private capital could flow into the stagnant construction channels, would appear to be fundamental, yet the only change conceded by the authors of the act, so far as known at this time, is a sop to small mining interests which happen to have a political bloc in Congress. Very small issues are to be liberated from the straitjacket imposed by the act!

It was the vast flow of private capital into construction which led the country out of the 1921 collapse. The war-created slack in construction at that period was nowhere near as great as the accumulated deficiency in construction now. That the time for action is overdue nobody doubts. The question is whether the way is going to be cleared for private enterprise to function, in this as well as in other fields.

American Lines Unrivaled on 2 Air Mail Routes

Four Additional Services Are Bid For Under Reorganization.

American Airlines, said to be dominated by the E. L. Cord interests, was the only bidder on two of four air mail routes for which proposals were opened yesterday. These routes are in addition to the 21 on which bids were received last week. Only six bids were received for the four.

The bidders:

Fargo, N. Dak., to Seattle, Wash.—Northwest Airlines, Inc., 33¾ cents per airplane mile; Northern Air Transport, Inc., 28.8 cents.

Fort Worth, Tex., to Los Angeles—American Airlines, Inc., 39.5 cents.

Detroit to Milwaukee—Kohler Aviation Corporation, 45 cents.

Newark to Chicago—American Airlines, Inc., 39.5 cents.

These bids, together with those submitted for the other 21 routes, will be studied by Postoffice and Department of Justice officials to determine whether reorganization provisions and other requirements have been met. Contracts on all proposed lines for a period of three months are expected to be awarded next week.

The fact that American Airlines was an uncontested bidder on two lines contrasts with the company's lack of success last week when only one of its eight bids was low.

Church Groups Mass Forces To Fight Crime

Flag Association Confers With D. C. Committee Here on Monday.

Mustering forces in the churches of America in a nation-wide war against crime and racketeering, the United States Flag Association will confer with its newly-appointed Washington Church Committee Monday afternoon in the Willard Hotel.

Composed of leading clergymen in Washington, the committee will formulate a program for immediate unification of all religious forces in the fight on lawlessness.

Indorsed by President Roosevelt, every member of the Cabinet and the Department of Justice, the association plans to make the churches a strong arm in the attack, it was learned yesterday.

The church committee, as its primary move, will enlist all church members in the District in an effort to check the growth of crime here. This is the first church group to be formed in the country, and many other cities, through similar committees, will follow its example.

Those on the Washington Committee are the Reverends ZeBarney Phillips, chairman; Howard E. Snyder, vice chairman; Howard E. C. Beery, Edward O. Clark, W. L. Darby, Simpson B. Daugherty, Frederick B. Harris, Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, Harry Manken, jr., James Shera Montgomery, Joseph R. Sizoo, Alan A. Stockdale and Rabbi A. Volkman.

Europe Seeks Part in Plane Sales to China

4 Powers Want to Share in Orders Now Given to America.

The governments of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany have assigned air attaches to their embassies in China in efforts to divert from the American market Chinese purchases of aeronautical equipment, it is claimed by the new "Aircraft Year Boonk" for 1934.

Soon to be released by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, the book annually published as a complete world record of aviation, further states that "greater progress has been madei n Chinese aeronautics during the last two years than ever before."

Prompted by the convincing operations of Japanese air forces as a means of National defense, the Chinese government has embarked on a program to upbuild its air force and equipment following widespread dissatisfaction when sufficient forces could not be marshaled for defense of Shanghai and othe areas, the publication states.

Until 1932, activities were sporadic and there was no coordination or plan of development. Schools were started and 100 competent pilots and as many mechanics were trained in 1933.

Fifty modern American pursuit planes were delivered to the Chinese air force in 1933. A number of other American training planes are in service at aviation schools.

On the boys' squad, Johnny Bondurant and Fred Robbins won stars, while Billy Burge, jr., June Turner, Jack Dodge, Harry Gravely and Sam Hedgecock won letters. From the girls' group Mildred Carter and Evelyn Andrews won stars while Frances Brodie, Florence Pannill, Margaret Ratliff, Carolyn Pannill, Barbara Hurd, Verna Thomas, Elizabeth Carter and Evelyn Robbins won letters.

Indian Tells How 'Baby Face' Put the Indian Sign on Him

"Poke Gun in Ribs, I Stop Making Maple Syrup," Catfish Laments.

By Ollie Catfish.

(Indian, held prisoner by George Nelson, Dillinger gangster, as told to an Associated Press staff writer.)

Lac Du Flambeau, Wis., April 27 (AP).—I was in my cabin near town Monday afternoon with my wife and my kids and a friend. We making maple syrup. Somebody knocked at door and when I go to see who was there a man stepped inside.

"Take me to town," he say.

"No," I say.

"I make you go," he say. "I show you something." Then he pulled gun from his pocket and told me I should stop making syrup. Then he went over to the fire and poured the sap on it and put it out. I guess he didn't want folks to see smoke and come to my cabin.

The man he kept me where he could watch what I was doing until last night, when our food was all gone except for a little bread.

Then the man took my old jacket and my cap and some old gray pants and me go with him to town. He say we're going after something to eat.

When we came to a place by the road where there was a car he let me stand while he went down to river, where there was a man fishing. He came back with keys to the man's car and he told me to show him where was Highway 70.

We came to where roads cross at Highway 70 and he told me to get out of the car. Then he tell me:

"If you say anything about this I will kill you."

Then I walked back to town and told folks there about the man.

I wasn't afraid of the man all the time he was at my house, even if he did have three guns.

When he took the car from the man who was fishing he threw $20 paper money on the ground to the man, but he didn't give me some money.

Guns Sheathed, Parley Started To Free Girl, 6

June Robles Grandfather Makes Mystery Trips as Manhunt Halts.

Tucson, Ariz., April 27 (AP).—Steel and bullets were ruled out in Arizona's drama-packed kidnaping case tonight in favor of cold cash as the best instrument to free 6-year-old June Robles from the clutches of kidnapers.

A man-hunting machine composed of 1,000 quick-shooting cowboys, ranchers, policemen, sheriffs and volunteers stood aside when the family, headed by Bernabe Robles, reputedly wealthy old cattleman, selected a go-between to deal with the abductors. It was indicated an attempt would be made to meet the $15,000 ransom asked.

The decision of the family to "talk turkey" with the abductors put out of commission, temporarily at least, the greatest posse ever mobilized in a State where this old-fashioned method once was famous.

As soon as the unnamed intermediary was chosen, messengers were sent out to posses of cattlemen, Border officers and American Legion volunteers advising them to halt their search.

Plans for a possible meeting between the abductors and the intermediary were not disclosed. Officers said they would take no part in any meeting with the abductors and that the family would be given a free hand.

Bernabe Robles, grandfather of the kidnaped girl, left his home three times early today and there were reports he was coming to an agreement with the abductors.

A few hours after the truce was called old Bernabe conferred with his son, Carlos G. Robles, assistant county atttrney, but no announcement came forth.

The grandfather, regarded as the one at whom the $15,000 ransom demand was aimed, showed no sign of discouragement, although little June had been missing nearly 48 hours.

Carlos Robles stopped the manhunt early today. He said the family felt the threat of the gun-toting cowboys, ranchers, police, sheriffs and citizen volunteers was too formidable to permit direct negotiations.

Rewards for the capture of the abductors mounted to $1,200.

Officers indicated there had been no sign that the kidnapers had changed their demands since June was lured into an automobile as she was on her way home from school Wednesday.

Slayer of Wife Is Put to Death In Jail Chair

Bolden Clutches Bible, Smiling; Hunt Made for Executioner.

With Bible clutched in his hand and a vague smile on his lips, Ernest H. Bolden, 27, colored, was electrocuted yesterday morning in the District jail for the murder of his wife.

Scarcely a half hour before the current was sent through his body, District officials discovered that, as a result of a recent retirement, the jail had no executioner. At 9:30 a. m. while Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the jail, was wondering who was to act as executioner, announcement of the appointment was made at the District building.

"A regular employe of the jail was appointed to official duty to perform a certain part of the ceremony," said the superintendent. The new executioner's identity was withheld.

Accompanied by guards, Bolden walked into the death chamber at 10:02 a. m., after a sound sleep and a spiritual conference with the Rev. James L. Pinn, colored. Mrs. Pinn sang "Lord, Clamp My Feet on Higher Ground," a spiritual, as Bolden was strapped into the chair.

Only one shock was necessary and Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald and Dr. W. K. Angevine, jail physician, pronounced him dead at 10:09.

For a quarter of an hour before the death march started telephone lines to the jail were kept open for a possible last-minute reprieve.

As soon as the body was removed, guards began to clear the chamber—the jail mess room—in preparation for the noon meal.

Bolden was convicted of the murder of his estranged wife at the home of her mother, Mrs. Jennie Plummer, 54, in the 1200 block of Thirty-seventh street northwest. He also shot and fatally wounded his mother-in-law, but was tried only for the murder of his wife.

Tributes Paid To Gen. Grant

Memorial Services Mark 112th Anniversary of Leader's Birth.

Rain and cold yesterday failed to disrupt exercises commemorating the 112th anniversary of the birth of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant at the Grant memorial statue in Union Square. The ceremony was sponsored by William B. Cushing Camp, Sons of Union Veterans, and the camp's auxiliary.

Several G. A. R. veterans participated in the outdoor program in spite of the weather, which kept down the crowd from an expected 300 to approximately 75. Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, delivered the address.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, grandson of the Civil War general and eighteenth President, attended the services. "America" "The Star-Spangled Banner" and patriotic airs of 1861 were played by the Marine Band, led by Arthur S. Witcomb, second leader.

Woman Held for Grand Jury On Charge of Cruelty to Baby

Claims Infant Belongs to Kin; $1,000 Bond Ordered.

Charged with cruelty to a 17-month-old baby girl, who is suffering from bronchial pneumonia at Gallinger Hospital, Mrs. Jessie Chapman Ritchie, alias Mrs. Jessie Chapman, was held under $1,000 bond for the grand jury, following preliminary hearing in Police Court yesterday.

Police removed the baby from a rooming house in the 1000 block of I street northwest Tuesday after they had been summoned by Mrs. Hattie Walters, landlady, who feared the baby would die.

In court yesterday Mrs. Walters told Judge Ralph Given that Mrs. Ritchie took a room in her establishment Sunday, and afterwards left the baby for many hours at a time in her room, although the child seemed seriously ill.

She telephoned the police after she had called in her family physician to look at the child, Mrs. Walters testified. She said after a liquid diet had been recommended for the infant, Mrs. Ritchie disappeared, and returned bringing a ham sandwich.

Mrs. Rtchie was arrested a short time after her return to the rooming house following the baby's removal. She gave her age as 24, and said the baby belonged to a sister-in-law, now living in North Carolina.

The infant has little better than an even chance to recover, physicians at Gallinger Hospital said last night.

Mrs. Roosevelt to View Rock From Home of Mary Lincoln

First Lady Will Visit Memory Garden of Scouts Today.

When Mrs. Roosevelt visits the Rock and Memory Garden at the National Girl Scouts' "Little House" today she will be among the first here to see a rock from the foundation of Mary Todd Lincoln's childhood home, in Lexington, Ky.

The stone is from the home of Mary Todd Lincoln's father, where she resided before her marriage, and to which she and the martyred President paid frequent visits after they were wed.

Troop No. 6, of the Lexington, Ky., Girl Scouts, gave the stone to the Little House. Other famous objects in the garden include a copper stone, from the Butte, Mont., Scouts; a paving stone from old New Orleans, a Buckeye tree from Ohio, and a Mary Wallace rose, named after the daughter of the former Secretary of Agriculture, sister of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Mother Saves 2 Babies From Blazing House

Berryville, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—How a mother, after carrying her 5-month-old baby to safety, smashed a window and rescued her 2-year-old son from their blazing home was recounted here today.

Early yesterday, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Broaddus caught fire from an overheated stove. Broaddus was working in a field. Mrs. Broaddus seized her baby from its crib and carried it to safety.

Returning, Mrs. Broaddus found entrance to the house cut off by flames. The 2-year-old boy was asleep in a rear room. Mrs. Broaddus smashed a window and rescued the child.

Before the court pronounced sentence, the defendant expressed one wish.

"Your honor," he began, "I would be perfectly satisfied if you would give me three months on each charge, one year in all."

"We aim to please," said the judge, "one year."

Horsemen Book Stables For Hagerstown Meet

Hagerstown, Md., April 27 (Spl.). Stables have been allotted to the following horsemen, who will race their horses at the 10-day race meeting of the Hagerstown Fair, which begins here May 15: A. S. Bowman, Joe Brooks, W. B. Worthington, E. R. Mitchell and Albert Hammond, according to an announcement by Race Secretary Edward J. Brennan.

Many of the horses now racing at Maryland will come here at the end of the season at the Maryland one-mile tracks, Brennan said, and will go directly from here to Charles Town, which 23-day meet opens the day following the close of the meeting here.

The Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce has assured General Manager Harold Bester, of the fair association, that it will contact business men here and will assure all visitors that there will be no gouging.

Spies Abound In Smart Sets Over Europe

Half Million Engaged in Task, Including Many Americans.

Paris (U.P.).—Up and down the highways of Europe, through the smart, cosmopolitan bars of Paris, Riga, Vienna and Sofia, at the gathering places along the Riviera, the Dalmatian coast, the sports slopes of the Alps, the spies are rampant.

A half million overjeweled, glittering beauties and steely-eyed, silent men are hard at work in the espionage industry. Europe is honeycombed with spy gangs. There are spies and superspies, spies who spy on other spies, and, closing their ranks, thousands of secret service sleuths, who wage unrelenting war on this undercover gentry.

The recent breaking up in Paris of the now-famed "International Spy Syndicate"—which would contract for a bit of spying of any sort, naval, military, economic, for a price—and the arrest of "La Belle Sophie" near the French Rhine frontier fortifications with a machine gun of a new model under her skirt were but two of many victories by the secret services.

Spying is the best paid profession in Europe today; the risk is great, but the records show less than 300 espionage arrests through all of Europe during 1933. Unemployment in other trades and professions has swung thousands of jobless to the lucrative work of spying.

Best Paid Profession.

Paris, Berlin, Vienna, London and most of the other capitals are spy-conscious. On the records of police in all these countries are the photos and descriptions of most of these spies. There are card-indexes which enable the secret service to trail them; an exchange of information between police of various countries has not made the spy's path any easier. Yet spying goes on.

French secret police officials admit that espionage has reached its greatest proportions in history. Before the war, there was a little discreet, almost polite espionage going on, but it was confined to keeping general tab on new arms, new warships and, if occasion presented, acquiring a naval code here or there.

Spies Swarm Everywhere.

Since the war no self-respecting government is without its army of spies. They are legion and they swarm everywhere. Certain French nationalist newspapers declared that half the foreign workmen engaged in building the French frontier fortifications were foreign spies. This was never officially denied.

Commercial and economic spying has been added to the military and naval espionage of other days. The steel and chemical industries are particularly bothered by espionage; even Paris dressmakers have had to adopt a system of passports for authentic buyers to prevent spying and piracy of models.

When French police broke up the International Syndicate, they found that this group had ramifications in the United States, England, Finland, Germany, Russia and Japan. Experts have worked for weeks to tabulate seized correspondence and documents, most of which had to be translated, and they still have months of work ahead of them.

This syndicate is typical of the present-day spy gangs. It worked for a number of governments and industrial groups, but was under no single flag. Its field marshal was a woman, Lydia Stahl, Russian-born, American-educated, master of arts at Columbia University, cosmopolitan-mannered and bejeweled.

Americans Accuse.

Police accuse two other Americans, Robert Gordon Switz and his wife, Marjory Talley Switz, of being major lieutenants. He was an aviator, who had quit flying; she was just out of Vassar. Yet Paris police proclaimed her the most skilled of espionage workers, able to throw off the best French detectives as she dashed through buildings with double entrances, leaving police at one door as she sped through another on her way to a secret meeting.

In the same syndicate were Bulgars and Germans, Finns and Russians, French and Japanese. The Frenchmen included the official of the Ministry of Navy, charged with using the secret naval code for translations. The flags of the Nations in that syndicate would look like a rainbow.

The rounding up of this syndicate is a tribute to police efficiency. One member of the syndicate received a postcard from some one in a separate Finnish Syndicate. From that postcard, police worked up their case. The ramifications included a laboratory for copying and enlarging documents, a wireless plant for clandestine sending, a "love nest" where the woman field marshall and her code-translating lover lived under the same roof.

Serve As Waiters.

These are the major spies: Paris, London, Berlin, Vienna and other capitals are rampant with minor spies. They serve you your coffee in the cafes and read your mail over your shoulder. They make up beds in cosmopolitan hotels as servants, and piece together torn correspondence you have thrown into waste baskets.

The enter your house as a cook or servant and go through your affairs at ease. They write voluminous reports about you and slip away under darkness to deliver them to some master mind and receive, in exchange, some bright new roubles or marks or francs or dollars.

Germans Buy Boeing Planes for Two Lines

New York (U.P.).—Americans soon will be flying between Berlin and Paris in 2½ hours, or from London to Berlin in 3 hours, thanks to airplanes built in the United States. Lufthansa, largest German line, has just taken delivery of the first of a fleet of 3-mile-a-minute Boeing multi-motored transports similar to those United Air Lines flies between New York, Chicago, and the Pacific Coast, and over other routes.

These Boeings are 50 miles an hour fater than the average speed of passenger transports now being flown in Europe.

ed Nelson the keys, and watched the little desperado walk to the car, prodding Ollie Catfish ahead with the pistol. The gangster forced the Indian to direct him to the junction of Highway 70 and Lac Du Flambeau road, then threw him out of the car.

Ollie Catfish walked to town, neglecting to inform police or officials of the Lac Du Flambeau Indian reservation by telephone, but Goetz had been more prompt. He checked up the license of his car—Wisconsin 3731—notified sheriffs of nearby counties, and the hunt was on.

Every woodsman who could be reached was called out with his deer rifle, shotgun or pistol. All night posses searched the forests, routed families from bed, and guarded highways and bridges.

Search Proves Fruitless.

At daylight, the search was concentrated on a woods near Fifield, Wis. The posse had tracked the automobile that far. A cautious search, however, proved that Nelson had fled.

A few hours later, police of St. Paul were informed by their headquarters to be on the watch for Nelson's car. The same order was broadcast to Chicago police, indicating authorities were uncertain in which way Nelson had fled.

Although there were hundreds of reports that Dillinger gangsters had been seen, sometimes as many as a dozen coming within an hour from widely separated sections, the search centered in the Wisconsin North Woods.

If Nelson could have hidden out in the woods for several days, authorities reasoned, why could not other members of the mob. In addition, Sheriff John Craig, of Price County, said he had information four of the seven Dillinger outlaws present in the Mercer shootings were hiding near Squaw Lake, Wis. Forces were concentrated there.

cently, were found in the apartment.

Police attempts yesterday to minimize the seriousness of the affair were contradicted by the heavy guard placed in the hospital and diligence of efforts to uncover the attackers.

Police refused to reveal the "trigger man" named by Mrs. Fontaine a few hours after the pretty brunette, clad in pajamas, was found lying at the entrance ofan Upper Darby apartment house. They admitted, though, the gunman was one of the two bandits with whom she escaped after the shooting of Phillips. A warrant issued for him charged assault with intent to kill.

Libraries Exempted From Rental Tax

Charleston, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner, has ruled that rentals from circulating libraries are exempt from the 2 per cent State consumers' sales tax.

In another ruling he decreed that payment for meals and rooms at boarding houses come under the tax, and in still another he directed that out-of-State magazine subscriptions should not be taxed, but those for magazines published within the State should be taxed.

Purchases made at wholesale by manufacturers, industries and producers of natural resources are exempt from the consumers' sales tax under a ruling by H. Isaiah Smith, head of the revenue bureau of the State tax department.

Three Get Terms At Harrisonburg

Youth Plead Guilty in Car Theft Case.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Harry McInturff, 24; Carl Shifflett, 19, and Robert Rush, 20, were sentenced to two years in the penitentiary today by Judge H. W. Bertram in Rockingham Circuit Court.

They pleaded guilty to robbing the Smith filling station at Pennlaird. They also admitted the theft and stripping of three automobiles.

The three already are under 18 months' sentence in the Page County Court for the theft of an automobile at Luray.

The Colombian government has given no orders concerning evacuation, it was said.

Liquor Taxes Fourth Largest Income Source

March Reaches Post-War Peak of $28,320,923, Up to Forecast.

Beer and liquor taxes pouring into the Federal Treasury at the rate of more than $300,000,000 annually appeared yesterday to have become the Federal Government's fourth largest source of income.

Taxas collected in March on alcoholic beverages reached a new monthly peak since war time, when $28,320,923 was paid into the Treasury. In March, 1933, the last month prior to legalization of 3.2 per cent beer, alcoholic beverages brough in only $1,254,756.

Beer and liquor tax collections now are exceeded only by income taxes, processing taxes on farm products and tobacco levies.

Indicated annual tax collections of more than $300,000,000 on alcoholic beverages are in line with estimates made prior to the repeal of prohibition.

Total internal revenue in March amounted to $390,352,847, against $174,035,835 in February and $242,464,384 in March, 1933, when processing taxes were not in effect.

This brought the total internal hevenue collections for the first nine months of the fiscal years to $1,962,339,156, against $1,164,421,906 in the previous fiscal year.

During March, income tax collections amounted to $228,525,628, against $176,259,368 in March, 1933.

Processing taxes in March brought in $36,313,013, against none a year ago; beer and liquor, $28,320,923, against $1,254,756 a year ago; cigarettes, $28,255,357, against $23,923,647 a year ago, and gasoline, $11,685,494, against $10,547,166 a year ago.

White House Beau Brummels

OUR Presidents took their wardrobes seriously in the old days . . . yet some may contend that Mr. Roosevelt's old fishing suit is as romantic as the satin knee-breeches and gold-laced waistcoats of another era. The fashion fancies of the Nation's great are discussed in an entertaining story in this week's Magazine Section.

Engineers Put Engine in Rear Of Future Auto

Radical Changes Delayed to Avoid Shocking the Public.

New York (U.P.).—Radical changes in automobile construction and design, which featured motor shows in many American cities during the last two months, are only a foretaste of a host of innovations that will be introduced early in 1935.

Leading automotive designers told the United Press that only the fear of shocking the buying public by too sudden a departure from former standards prevents the immediate introduction of models startling to the layman's conception. Rear-end engines, for example, are scheduled for adoption by many American manufacturers in the near future, although they may not come into general use for two or three years.

Streamlining was the outstanding topic of chatter among visitors to New York's 1934 show. Chrysler in particular featured the "teardrop" effect, with bulging hood, sharply contrasting with the older wedge-shaped prow.

More Streamlines in 1935.

While only a few American manufacturers displayed the streamlined car in January, engineers predict that almost all 1935 models will conform to this new trend. Its sponsors claim that not only does the new shape add beauty to the body, but in practice it results in smoother riding, more mileage per gallon of gasoline and allows more width in the front seat.

The second important innovation in domestic automobile manufacture within the last year was the widespread use of automatic transmission. A centrifugal clutch automatically shifts gears after a certain number of revolutions has been attained. This feature is also likely to be employed by most manufacturers before next January.

Among the many other construction features recently developed and extensively advertised were the following:

Independently sprung wheels, widely publicized in the United States under the "knee action" slogan. The elimination of the solid front axle and the substitution of individual wheel suspension makes for easier riding and smooths off the bumps in a rough road.

"No-draft" ventilation, accomplished through pivoting halved windows. This permits easier adjustment and direction of the air current to insure a constant flow within the tonneau.

Automatic starting. By depressing the accelerator when the engine stalls the motor is cut back immediately.

Roomier and lower bodies, resulting in greater comfort and safety in driving.

Safety glass, theoretically nonbreakable. Many States now have laws requiring that all cars be equipped with this type of glass.

Higher Compression, More Gas.

Motors have been improved by increasing the compression ratio, thus providing quicker acceleration and greater speed. Incidentally, this engine stimulation requires increased gasoline consumption.

Rise in use of rubber mountings, particularly on the engine and transmission.

Chassis frames have been strengthened for tortional and longitudinal strains by the introduction of an "X" cross member, and, later, with a "K" cross member. Lighter chassis are being manufactured through greater use of aluminum.

Brakes and clutch are materially more effective than in older models, while inclusion of the syncromesh eliminates gear clashing on the transmission.

Pursuing the constant search for easier riding qualities, manufacturers have moved both front and rear seats forward on the chassis, so that they no longer are directly over the axles.

Future Plans Cloaked.

Improvements planned for future models are, of course, closely guarded secrets in most instances. It is well known, however, that all designers are perfecting streamlining, automatic transmission, and improvements in carburetion, lubrication and cooling systems.

A thicker veil enshrouds the destiny of rear-end engines. Yet automotive experts picture ultra-streamlined machines powered by rear-end engines as the probable American car of the not distant future.

Construction engineers and designers of practically all large manufacturers are believed in trade circles to be conducting extensive research along these lines.

Noted French Tapestry Trade Hit by Slump

Modern Furnishing Trend Ruins Market for Famous Pieces.

Paris (U.P.).—France, one of the last European countries that has tried to protect and preserve its ancient crafts, has succumbed to the ravages of modern civilization and her famous Aubusson tapestries are threatened with becoming exinct.

The far-reaching effects of a modern hurried and harried civilization have even reached the Orient, where rugs are being made by machine and tinted with aniline dyes instead of vegetable colors.

The French Aubusson tapestry industry, famous for five centuries, is now menaced with extinction. In 1927 there were 900 workers employed in weaving Aubusson tapestries. Today there are 200 at work.

With a population of 7,000 inhabitants the small town in the Department of the Creuse is compelled to spend 250,000 francs annually for the support of its unemployed. Families that have, for generations, pursued no other occupation than that of weaving for the Aubusson factories, are faced with lack of future employment and are training the present generation for other forms of employment, thus destroying the old apprenticeship in the ancient craft.

Changes in the manner of life in France have hit the tapestry business with almost as much force as the world economic depression in general. There is no longer a desire for scenes in tapestry of the piping shepherds and coy shepherdesses gamboling on the green. Amorous idylls have no longer a place on the walls of modern studio apartments.

Aubusson is making a desperate effort to modernize its industry to compete with the "trends" and to forestall the death of its mainspring industry. Working on subjects foeign to their education and training, Aubusson weavers are making valiant efforts to depict modern scenes and reproductions of Picasso or Braque, which experiments have not been entirely successful.

Aubusson is trying also to secure from Parliament the grant of a government subsidy such as has been given to the Gobelin and Beauvais factories. Prices, in the meantime, of these famous tapestries have been reduced to such an extent that they may be purchased by those in moderate circumstances instead of only by millionaires as erstwhile.

Mattern Invites Peery To Attend Chicago Fair

Richmond, April 27 (AP).—Jimmie Mattern, round-the-world flier, called on Gov. George C. Peery at the State capitol today and invited him to visit the Century of Progress at Chicago this summer. Mattern is on a State-to-State flight, during which he will deliver similar invitations to all the country's governors.

"He is a fine chap," the Governor said, describing his globe-girdling caller. "I would like to make the trip, but it is too early now to talk about next summer."

Probers Puzzled By Woman's Death

Wheeling, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Authorities were divided today in opinion as to the death of Mrs. William Lias, who died last night in the apartment of Mrs. Michael Russell, a cousin.

The victim's nose was broken, there were two gashes in her forehead and five pistol bullets in her body. Don McKee, prosecuting attorney, said death was a case of either suicide or self-defense, while Will Cruise, coroner, concluded the woman had killed herself.

These officers quoted Mrs. Russell as saying that Mrs. Lias came to her apartment "in a highly nervous state," seized a pistol and announced she intended killing herself. A scuffle then ensued, she said, to prevent the shooting.

Shenandoah Maps Drive for Children

Woodstock, Va., April 27, (Spl.).—Members of the Shenandoah County committee, in charge of raising funds for the Children's Home Society of Virginia, met here today to map final plans for raising the county's quota of $750.

The Rev. John B. Frantz, Woodstock, minister, is chairman of the local drive. Of the $750 to be raised, the Shenandoah County Board of Supervisors has promised $250. The balance will be raised through popular subscription.

During the past year, it is pointed out, the Children's Home Society has cared for 16 children from Shenandoah County, 11 of whom still remain in care of the society.

Situation Tense As Mines Reopen

Dante, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—All local mines were operating again today after an enforced shutdown of one day. The Appalachian Power Co. has posted a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who on Monday dynamited a power line.

Seven police cars and crews are on duty. Increased bad feeling between the strikers and company allies led to recall of the State officers.

New Charges Hurled at Head Of Blind School

Immorality at Staunton Place Is Alleged by Alumni.

Staunton, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—"There have been more accidents, tragedies and scandals during the present supervisory incumbency than during the whole previous history of the school for nearly 100 years," the alumni of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind declared today in renewing their demands for the removal of Prof. Howard M. McManaway, superintendent.

At a March meeting the board of visitors opened its investigation of charges against Prof. McManaway's administration, and today the alumni group made new allegations against the school head, including one that "immoral conditions exist in the school and on the grounds that are a stench to the nostrils of the people of Staunton."

The new allegations were filed with the board, which voted to examine the new charges at a later meeting. State Senator W. H. East is chairman of the board.

The alumni, in their newest declaration, set forth that if the members of the board have been "so long associated with Prof. McManaway that they may retain him on account of sympathy, your petitioners believe it is the duty of the board to ask the Governor of the State to appoint an entirely disinterested but fair committee to carefully inquire into the charges."

The petitioners stated that apparently, at the previous meeting, the board "seemed to feel that the chief grievance complained of was the method of teaching the deaf, adopted in the school by action of the superintendent," but added that they believed that the method of teaching is by no means the only or chief objection that they have.

The petition presented today bore the name of Charles Curry, Staunton attorney, as counsel for Reuben L. Altizer, Clarence Lee Christian, Benjamin E. Yaffey and Bernard M. Moore, alumni.

3 Relief Officers Chosen by Kump

Turner to Return to Work on State Charities.

Charleston, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Gov. H. G. Kump today appointed three new members of the State relief administration, which is in charge of State-Federal relief agencies.

They are Homer A. Holt, State attorney general; Frank A. Bell, chairman of the Kanawha County relief administration, and Mrs. J. R. Thomas, of Charleston. Their addition increases the relief board membership to seven.

The board today approved a request by Francis W. Turner, director of public welfare, that he be relieved of relief duties so that he might give more attention to the original duties of the welfare department, which was created to care for crippled and dependent children, veterans and other persons. Turner will resign as relief administrator and turn all relief duties over to William H. Beehler, head of Federal relief agencies in West Virginia.

Mencken Ridicules Brain Trust Cure whom I admire and venerate, though I do not like their medicines."

The early part of his address was devoted to telling a fable concerning a man who, instead of taking the advice of his physician to "cut out your boozing and your 36-hole golf, eat lightly, and go to bed early," resorted to "wizards," each of whom had a "sure fire" cure.

He was finally forced to take the advice of his original physician and soon was well again.

"This little story," said Mencken, "has a moral. We are all acquainted with a fine old fellow who greatly resembles the man I have been telling you about. He lives at Washington, and we call him Uncle Sam.

"A year or two ago he began to feel very wobbly. He had horrible dreams at night, and a dark brown taste in the morning. The regular doctors down at Washington told him that he was living too fast, and advised him to slow down a bit. But he didn't like the prescription, and refused to follow it.

"Instead, he began to send for all sorts of amateur healers, each of whom allowed that he alone could cure him. No two of them agree—save on one thing only: they all send in tremendous bills. The poor old man, poisoned by their doses, is not only making heavy weather of it, with many setbacks; he is also going broke.

Recovery Despite Waste.

"And when I say that Uncle Sam is going broke, it is the same as saying, of course, that the American taxpayer is going broke. Every nickle that the professors at Washing are throwing away will have to come out of his pocket.

"Has all this waste of money done us any good? I doubt it. We have moved toward recovery, not because of it, but in spite of it. The English, who were much worse off than we were two years ago, have gone much further along the road than we have.

"They have a surplus in their treasury, and are even reducing taxes. Yet they have done this without putting a single bright young professor on their pay roll, or laying out a cent for economic madstones and bile-beans."

Apple Grading Changes Sought

Action Taken by Board of Virginia Horticultural Organization.

Staunton, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—The board of directors of the Virginia State Horticultural Society voted unanimously yesterday to recommend certain changes in the apple grading specifications subject to further revision that may be made necessary by action of the Eastern Apple Growers Council, meeting in Washington today.

Among the recommendations are that the grade provided for by amendment at the last session of the Virginia Legislature to the apple grade law shall be designated as domestic grade and that the term "unclasified" shall be construed and applied as heretofore and that the privilege to pack apples thereunder shall not be denied.

It was also voted that the domestic grade shall consist of apples of one variety which are clean, not overripe, free from decay, internal breakdown and freezing injury and from any injury or defect which can not be removed without loss of more than 10 per cent of the total volume of the apple and that not more than 10 per cent of the surface of the apple in the aggregate shall be affected with scab and that apples packed under the domestic grade in closed packages shall be stamped with the minimum size.

Other recommendations provided that in order to allow for variations incident to proper grading and handling not more than a total of 10 per cent by weight of the apples may be below requirements of this grade provided that not more than 5 per cent shall be allowed for apples which are overripe or show decay, internal breakdown and freezing injury and not more than 2 per cent for soft rot.

Bridge Is Pushed; RFC Aid Awaited

Port Conway Span Goes Ahead Despite Mixup.

Richmond, April 27 (Spl.).—Work proceeds apace on the Port Conway bridge across the Rappahannock River near Fredericksburg, bringing Richmond closer to Baltimore, but Henry G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, revealed today that the $135,000 loan promised by the RFC has never been made.

The bridge, named for James Madison, and connecting Port Royal with Port Conway, will cost $146,000, of which the Government agreed to furnish the needed $135,000.

The RFC, Mr. Shirley said, wanted the highway commission to give the Government a $6,000 bond for 10 years as a guaranty the bridge would be operated. The law does not permit such bonds and the bridge company then agreed to put up the bond. But the bonding company has refused, because the company was formed as a temporary organization to get the bridge under way. The bridge, Mr. Shirley said, will be completed in July.

Strasburg School Honors Awarded

Graduation Exercises to Be Held May 10.

Strasburg, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Miss Mildred Keller has been selected valedictorian of the senior class of the Strasburg High School, which will complete its school term May 10. Miss Evelyn Fisher will deliver the salutatory.

G. W. Garner, principal, stated today that nearly 40 seniors expect to receive their diplomas at the final exercises. The names of those graduating will not be made public until after final examinations are completed.

Finals will begin May 6, when the Rev. Wallace M. Brashears, pastor of Market Street Methodist Church, Winchester, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon in Strasburg Christian Church. Class night exercises will be held May 9, in a local theater, and graduation exercises the next evening.

House Mining Bloc Wins Fight To Ease Securities Act Rules

terprises, necessarily of a speculative nature, of the fear of prosecution under th eact, which for months has held up the flow of credit into mine financing.

Speaking for the mining bloc, Representative Scrugham said the regualtions modification accomplished everything his group had asked in an administrative way. At a meeting of the informal organiaztion of Western members, they were unanimously approved.

Scrugham, and other House and Senate members, nevertheless is intent on liberalizing many features of the act itself, and expressed the hope that an understanding can be reached with the Administration this session.

Modern amendments to the act already have been worked out by a special departmental committee and have been forwarded to the President, but there has been a general feeling in Congress that they do not go far enough.

Gives Wide Latitude.

Chairman Duncan U Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee recently admitted his committee may have to agree to some changes.

As explained by the Federal Trade Commssion, the exemptions agreed to yesterday on security issues of $100,000 or under "removes the requirements that the issue be sold for cash, that the underwriting expenses bel imited to 10 per cent, and that the stock be in units of at least 100 per cent, provided that certain other specified, conditions are observed."

The cost of stock distribution and promotion, limited to 10 per cent under the old regulations, is raised to 25 per cent under yesterday's revised draft.

Thus. 75 per cent of the proceeds of an issue are required to be spent in the operation and development of the enterprise itself, instead of 90 per cent, as before.

Another liberalizing change permits stocks to be sold in any size unit, instead of the $100 a share par value requirement in the old rules. Congressional critics had argued that the $100 par value requirement made it unusually difficult to dispose of the stock.

Rules Still in Effect.

With security issues of $30,000 and under practically exempted from the act, restrictions on issues between $30,000 and $100,000 remaining in the regulations, provide:

That the prospectus required to be furnished to purchasers of the stock be filed with the Federal Trade Commission before the stock is offered to the public.

Presidential Tariff Powers Check's Slated

Resentment Is Growing on Sole Control Provision.

it would unduly cause delay in negotiations where the essence is time.

"You mean like they acted in cancelling the air-mail contracts," suggested Senator Reed to Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, when the latter made this explanation.

Virtually all the Republicans are opposed to the tariff bill and they will be joined by several Democrats. Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, already has expressed his hostility. Several of his colleagues, while keeping silent, are uncomfortable about it. But Democratic disaffection is not expected to be sufficient to imperil the measure.

So far 15 amendments to the bill have been proposed in the Senate. All have been designed to restrict and modify the President's power to reduce tariffs 50 per cent in exchange for reciprocal trade benefits by other countries.

Cost Plan Flayed.

The cost of production theory of computing tariffs was severely thumped yesterday before the Finance Committee by Robert L. O'Brien, the Republican chairman of the Tariff Commission. He cited instances of the difficulty, if not impossibility, of determining costs of production.

He argued that the so-called flexible system of tariff making, now in the law, was indeed most nflexible, chiefly because tariff commissions under both Democratic and Republican administrations lacked the courage to recommend what their members know the President is against. eH termed the flexible clause system "an extreme joke."

30-70 Silver Monetization, Roosevelt Aim

Proposes Plan to Avoid Immediate Permanent Legislation.

adjustments in monetary policies, to as high as 30 per cent.

Chairman Steagall declined to discuss what transpired at the White House, but said he was inclined "to go along with the President."

"I should like to see silver recognized—yes—but we should cooperate with the White House," said Steagall.

His statement was interpreted as indicating the committee chairman will do all in his power to hold the Goldsborough bill in committee, in line with the President's wishes.

Goldsborough Silent.

Representative Goldsborough, author of the monetary bill, said he would not be at liberty to talk until Monday.

Senator Thomas said President Roosevelt had "broadly hinted" he intended to work up to a 30-70 ratio when he called at the White House last Saturday.

"But it is apparent on the surface that he can not do it without purchasing silver in world markets at a premium," said Thomas. He pulled a pencil from his pocket, referred casually to Treasury statistics on his desk, and did a little figuring.

"On a 30 per cent basis with gold, monetization of silver would force the acquisition of $2,226,500,000 in silver, altogether," he said.

"We now have only $540,000,000 in silver dollars and $300,000,000 in subsidiary silver coin, a total of about $840,000,000 in silver stocks.

Predicts Senate Action.

"It would mean we would have to buy $1,386,000,000 of additional silver, and we can't get it without paying a premium. I doubt if we could purchase as much as $500,000,000."

Although 15,000,000,000 ounces of silver have been mined in modern times, there are only 9,400,000,000 ounces of silver accounted for in the world at the present time, of which about 4,000,000,000 are in British India; 2,500,000,000 ounces in China; 800,000,000 in this country, and the rest scattered haphazardly through other nations.

The Oklahoman predicted a Senate vote on mandatory silver legislation before the end of the present session. The Dies bill, sanctioning foreign silver payments for American agricultural surpluses, already has passed the House. It has been favorably reported by the Senate Agriculture Committee, with liberalizing amendments, Nationalizing silver stocks and providing for a broad silver purchase program.

Raps Morgenthau Survey.

Thomas predicted last night that before it runs the Capital gauntlet foreign silver payments for American manufacturing surpluses will be incorporated in the measure.

He denounced Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposed extension of his silver holdings survey as a move to "find a lot of members of Congress as holders of silver, to discredit their advocacy of silver legislation."

Treasury statistics disclosed the department has slightly increased the number of silver certificates through domestic purchases of newly mined silver.

Under the London silver agreement, the United States for three years must buy practically all of the newly mined domestic stocks. Since December, 64½ cents an ounce has been paid for the metal, a premium of about 20 cents. About 4,500,000 ounces have been purchased.

Senate Approves D. C. Works Bill

not be permitted to interfere with the carrying out of the Capper-Cramton park buying law.

Development and improvement of park and playground lands is to be undertaken by the Commissioners out of the $18,000,000 under an amendment written into the bill by the committee.

Other Projects Named.

Other projects in the works program include construction of a tuberculosis hospital, an addition to Gallinger Hospital, a wall or prison at Lorton, Va., additional school buildings and a sewerage and refuse disposal plant.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, said the measure would be considered at the regular meeting Wednesday. Under House procedure the measure may not be brought up on the floor until next District day, the second Monday in May.

Although a majority of the committee members expressed themselves in favor of the measure, Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), Texas, archenemy of the District, said he was opposed to the bill and would seek to block its passage.

The Texan's threat makes it unlikely that the bill will be brought up for consideration under unanimous consent prior to the time it is reached on the District calendar.

Representative Norton said she might seek the aid of Speaker Rainey and Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic floor leader, to get the bill up under a special rule which would bring it to a vote without undue delay.

Luer Kidnaper Flees Prison Via Mississippi

Chester, Ill., April 27 (AP).—Randell Norvell, serving a life sentence for his part in the kidnaping of August Luer, Alton, Ill., banker, escaped from State's prison today by crawling through a sewer and swimming to freedom in the Mississippi River.

Warden J. E. Raegen immediately sent about 200 guards and special officers in search of the kidnaper.

Cannon, Aid Found Not Guilty Of Covering Up Election Funds

Bishop Calm at Verdict.

The defendants received the verdict with characteristic calm, amounting virtually to indifference. Miss Burroughs displayed not the slightest emotion; Bishop Cannon professed to be sleepy and said he was "going home and take a nap." He wore a grim-lipped smile as he listened to the verdict.

Later, after issuing a statement, the bishop departed for Jackson, Miss., to attend a conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Shrugging aside congratulations, Miss Burroughs returned to her home in Richmond.

The foreman of the jury, William J. Newman, 2633 Seventeenth street northeast, said only two formal ballots were taken. At first, the jurors stood nine to three for acquittal. During the subsequent discussion, the minority yielded, one by one, until the unanimous "not guilty" verdict was reached.

Wife Laughs Happily.

Mrs. James Cannon, jr., burst into happy laughter and led the rush to the counsel table, where her husband and Miss Burroughs had settled back to endure the ordeal of congratulations. Robert H. McNeill, chief of the defense counsel, declared he was "very happy," but that the verdict was "no surprise."

'Oh, bishop," exclaimed one ardent woman admirer in the little crush around the defendants, "I'd just like to hug you!"

"Hug away," said the bishop, with a grin.

Pressed to express her feelings at the verdict, Miss Burroughs sat with pursed lips, staring back at her questioners through thick lensed spectacles.

"Don't say anything!" admonished Bishop Cannon, and Miss Burroughs didn't.

The same poise that she had shown throughout the three weeks' trial remained with her until she disappeared aboard a downtown trolley.

Cleared on Both Counts.

The verdict of acquittal was rendered on both counts of an indictment charging conspiracy against the corrupt practices act for failure to report to Congress all the 1928 anti-Smith campaign contributions of E. C. Jameson, New York insurance man.

Justice Gordon's charge to the jury, which required nearly two hours yesterday, followed the conclusion of summation for the Government by United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

Garnett castigated the bishop as a "ward heeler", ridiculed his assertion that campaign contributions were honestly spent and demanded the maximum verdict of two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine for each defendant.

The court told the jurors they must decide whether there was conspiracy between the defendants not to report the Jameson contributions, warning them one could not be acquitted or convicted, without the other.

Court Outlines Case.

"If you find that the defendants arranged to refrain from reporting any contribution made by Jameson for the 'Headquarters Committee, Anti-Smith Democrats', it is your duty to find them guilty," Justice Gordon said. He pointed out that Bishop Cannon's position as chairman of the "Headquarters Committee" resulted from the Asheville, N. C., conference in July, 1928, which was the argument advanced to Jameson by C. Bascom Slemp in persuading the millionaire to make campaign contributions to the bishop.

The defense argued, however, that the Jameson contributions were given to Bishop Cannon for any purpose he chose, and that all of the New Yorker's gift of $65,300 not reported to Congress was spent through a Virginia State committee.

Before boarding a sleeper for Jackson, the bishop issued a statement declaring that since the summer of 1928 he had been "the object of attack by many regular, standpat Democrats and opponents of prohibition."

"For five years I have been attacked in the press and for over two years have been under indictment in the courts," Cannon said.

"The physical strain has been exceedingly severe, but I am thankful to say knowledge of my innocence has enabled me to carry on with practically unabated vigor, and my physical condition is far better than in 1930.

"Of course, the financial strain has also been very great, and many friends sent contributions to enable me to meet it."

The bishop concluded by declaring he would continue to work for local, State and National prohibition.

York, chairman, charged officials of the mill "entered negotiations in bad faith with the definite intention not to make any agreement."

Michael Francis Doyle, attorney for the American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, and John W. Edelman, union research director, discussed the dispute at informal conferences with NRA officials.

Edelman later told reporters that Polk Tarwater, president of the Harriman mill, "controlled" the town of 8,000 inhabitants. He explaihed the union sought to organize the 600 workers in the mill and was restrained by a State court order.

He said 120 union members were sent to jail for contempt of court. He added they were at liberty under bonds totaling $100,000.

"The Harriman company," he said, "attempted to pursue customary futile Southern tactics regarding unionism and then by sharp practices to avoid compliance with the law because NRA finally decided to enforce the law."

Companies in Denial.

United Press dispatches from Harriman quoted company officials as denying they violated the NRA. They insisted if forced to close the mill by "the stigma against us, 600 honest and contented workmen" would lose their jobs.

Harriman merchants who withdrew their eagles from store windows were said to have received telephone protests from persons who said they would not deal with a non-NRA concern.

"We can't let that mill go down," explained G. W. Walker, one of the merchants. "The mill has been given a raw deal. It stayed on the code. It paid the wages. The mill just didn't recognize the union. That's all they can say against the mill."

Howard Tests To Start Today For Post Prize

14 Finalists in Scholarship Competition to Meet Wesley Committee.

The first of the series of campus finals of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition takes place today at Howard University, with 14 finalists from preliminaries throughout the metropolitan Washington area viewing for one of the project's major awards of four-year tuition scholarships.

Girl contestants outnumber boys today by 12 to 2, but the race for the coveted prize, approximately $1,200, will find the boys on the mark and quite as determined as their opponents when the event opens, promptly at 10 a. m., in the office of the dean of Howard's College of Liberal Arts.

In spite of the fact that six of this first group of contestants are National Honor Society members, who have maintained consistently high records in school, Dr. Charles H. Wesley, chairman of Howard's special examining committee, yesterday announced his committee's intention to give all contenders, regardless of previous scholastic attainments, an equal start toward the prize goal.

Careful Selection Guaranteed.

"The examining committee's aim will be to select from this group of outstanding students," stated Dr. Wesley, "the one who is most deserving and who also is equipped to make the most of opportunities at Howard and in his or her future career. Although previous scholastic attainments will, of course, influence our decision, we will base this important selection also upon private oral interviews with each contestant. Our task will not be an easy one, but with common-sense interviews and the careful academic tests we will strive for a choice that will be satisfactory to all concerned."

A variety of tuition courses are designated by the Howard candidates in connection with the training they seek. One of the boys, William H. Lewis, of Dunbar High School, wants to enter the Medical School, and the other, Charles R. Williams, of Armstrong, is anxious to major in music and physical training.

Six of the girls want to enter the College of Education, to specialize in the teaching of favored subjects, two want academic courses in the College of Liberal Arts, one desires to specialize in art, while three have delayed their final choice.

Boys Have High Records.

Lewis, who is 17, has maintained an excellent high school record, and his extra-curriculum activities include dramatic club events, in which he has played leading roles. Williams, who is 17, is acting lieutenant in his cadet company, a member of Armstrong's track team and accompanist in the glee club there.

The girls who are ambitious for teaching careers are Blanche L. Scott, of Dunbar High School, who wants to teach Latin; Doris Butler, of Armstrong, who wants to specialize in domestic art instruction; Susie B. Perkins, of Armstrong, interested in domestic science teaching; Inez Johnson, of the Pomonkey, Md., High School, who hopes to teach history, and Jane Elizabeth Brightful, of the Robert Moton High School at Westminster, Md., and Nina Honemond, of the Rockville, Md., High School, both of whom want the general training.

Blanche Scott is a varsity debater at Dunbar and a member of that school's chapter of the National Honor Society. Doris Butler, who is 18, is a member of both the Honor Roll Society and the Science Club at Armstrong. Susie Perkins is another member of the National Honor Society and also is vice president of her senior class and a member of her school's Current Literary Club, Excelsior Circle and the Girl Reserves.

Variety of Tastes.

Inez Johnson is president of her senior class, a contributor to her school paper, serves on student council committees and takes an active part in debates, declamations, volley ball games and Glee Club programs. Jane Brightful, 16, leads in her school's debating, dramatic, orchestral and choral events. Nina Honemond, who is 16, is stated by her principal to be a leader in a number of extra-curriculum activities, as well as of excellent scholastic standing.

Academic training is the goal of Pearl R. Faulkner, of the local Cardoza High School, and of Fannie Woods, of the Sumner High School at Martinsburg, W. Va. The former, who is 19 years old, is another National Honor Society member. The latter has been active in dramatics and Glee Club events at her school and has rated high scholastic marks.

Elsie Woodbury, of Cardoza High School, has majored in commercial art in high school and hopes to specialize in this work in college. She is especially talented in this line, having won school prizes with her creations.

Others Recommended.

Uncertain as to specialization, but recommended by their principals as promising college material, are Frances Datcher, of Dunbar High School, 16-year-old former president of Dunbar's National Honor Society chapter, who is completing her high school course in two and a half years; Ernestine Greene, president of Cardoza's chapter of the Honor Society, who is also president of both her senior class and her school's Amaryllis Club, and Clara M. Marlowe, of the Clarke County Training School at Berryville, Va., who is vice president of her school's athletic association and who is recommended by her principal as adapted to both literary and domestic training.

An entertainment program, under the management of Dr. Max Meenes, of the Howard faculty, will include a luncheon in a main dining hall, a sightseeing tour through Washington and Arlington, and a tea, with a committee of students and faculty members serving as hosts.

Following the tea, Dr. Wesley will announce the scholarship winner, and will officiate in the presentation of sterling silver medals to each of the finalists, gifts from The Post for their semifinals victories.

3-Day Virginia Dental Session Opens Monday

Varied Program Arranged for Charlottesville Convention.

Charlottesville, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Leading members of the dental profession in the State will come here next week to attend the sixty-fifth annual meeting of the Virginia State Dental Association, which opens Monday for a three-day session. Dr. S. D. Kent, of Danville, president, will preside.

A varied program has been arranged, including a banquet and dance, golf tournament and business sessions, a feature of which will be a discussion of the State's license tax for dentists.

The sessions will be held at the Monticello Hotel, where a meeting of the executive council will be held at 8 p. m. Sunday. Members of the council are S. D. Kent, of Danville; J. T. Ashton, of Alexandria; A. M. Wash and Thomas W. Wood, of Richmond; S. C. Warden, of Norfolk; R. H. Phipps, of Marion, and E. J. Applewhite, of Newport News.

The opening session of the convention will be held at 2 p. m., when the visitors will be welcomed by Armistead M. Dobie, dean of the department of law at the University of Virginia. The response will be by Dr. J. E. John, of Roanoke.

Following the president's address, Dr. Harry Bear, dean of the school of dentistry at the Medical College of Virginia, will read a paper on some trends in dental education and organized dentistry. He will be followed by Drs. Arthur B. Crane and Harry Kaplan, of Washington, D. C.

The banquet and dance will be held Monday night.

Among the reports at the first business session Tuesday will be that of the legislative committee, Dr. J. B. Lester, of Richmond, chairman.

Following the submission of committee reports at the afternoon session, Dr. Dudley C. Smith, of the department of dermatology at the University of Virginia, will read a paper. Dr. Z. L. Edwards, of Washington, D. C., will give some reflections concerning dental economics, and Dr. Paul J. Aufderheide, of Cleveland, Ohio, member of the staff of Lutheran, Huran Road and Charity Hospitals, will discuss problems in extraction and oral surgery.

Preceding their final business session Tuesday night, Dr. Sidney S. Jaffe, of Washington, D. C., will speak. The business conduct of a small-town dental practice will be the subject of a paper by Dr. Charles S. Webb, of Bowling Green.

Wednesday will be devoted to a series of general clinics, to be held in the University of Virginia Hospital.

Charles Shank To Be Buried In Valley Today

Harrisonburg Resident Dies Following Operation.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Charles D. Shank, 54, president of the Harrisonburg Candy & Fruit Co., will be buried tomorrow in Woodbine Cemetery, after services conducted from his home.

Mr. Shank died yesterday after an emergency operation.

He was former director of the Harrisonburg Chamber of Commerce and was one of the leaders in the development of Massanutten Caverns, near here. He and his brother, O. D. Shank, organized a wholesale candy and fruit company here in 1921. Two years later Mr. Shank became general manager of the Massanutten Caverns, a post he held until he resigned two years ago. He also was head of the Massanutten Airways, which owned the first transport plane in the Shenandoah Valley.

The early part of Mr. Shank's life was spent on a farm in West Rockingham. His widow, three children, and nine brothers and sisters survive.

Newest Cruiser Reaches Norfolk

New Orleans Starts on "Shakedown" Trip.

Norfolk, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—On the first leg of a "shakedown cruise," the new cruiser New Orleans arrived in Hampton Roads today from New York. She will remain until May 4, and proceed to sea for speed trials.

The New Orleans is a 10,000-ton fighting ship, the newest addition to the Navy. She is to join the fleet off New York, May 31, and will pass in review before President Roosevelt.

The cruiser will take on supplies, fuel and ammunition here. She will give her guns a trial while she is at sea, so if any alteration in their foundation is necessary, it can be made before she joins the fleet.

Board Forces Milk Rise in Waynesboro

Dealers Will Boost Price to Meet Regulations.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 27 (Spl.). Effective May 1, wholesale and retail prices in the Waynesboro market will be increased to conform with the April 2 regulations established by the Pennsylvania Milk Control Board, it was learned today.

James P. Heisey, investigator, found prices below the minimum set by the board. He immediately called a meeting of all dealers and warned them they were subject to fine or imprisonment.

Homemakers to Tour Shrines of St. Marys

A pilgrimage to St. Marys County, Md., May 8 will conclude the season's work for the Homemakers Clubs of Prince Georges County, it was announced at Hyattsville. Stops will be made at Charlotte Hall, Ye Coole Springs, St. Marys City and Mattapani, once the home of the Calverts.

A hostess committee from the St. Mary Rural Homemakers Club will welcome the group and explain the historical places of Maryland's first Capital. The pilgrimage is open to the public. Reservations may be made at the county office in Hyattsville.

Miss Blanche C. Caulk, 80, Dies in Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., April 27 (Spl.).—Miss Blanche C. Caulk, member of one of the oldest families of Annapolis, died at her residence today after an illness of several years. She was 80 years old.

Surviving are a sister, Miss Nannie Caulk, and a nephew, Daniel C. Nicholas, with whom she lived. Funeral services will be held at the residence tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Salesman Injured When Autos Collide

Crisfield, Md., April 27 (Spl.).—C. Irwin Jones, salesman, this city, narrowly escaped death when his automobile collided with another on State highway, near Mariners. Jones' nose was broken and he received lacerations. He was on his way from Crisfield to Snow Hill.

Retired Minister Wins Scout Medal

Berryville, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—The Rev. T. Carter Page, of Berryville, retired Episcopal minister and former Scoutmaster of the local troop of Boy Scouts, has been awarded the Silver Beaver medal for meritorious service to scouting.

The award was made on the basis of 12 years of service to scouting, which included scoutmasterships at Alta Vista, Va.; South Boston, Va., and Berryville.

Other officials of the Shenandoah Area Council who have received the Silver Beaver in recent years include Eugene B. Cooper, Winchester; Judge D. H. Rodgers, Martinsburg, W. Va., and C. Vernon Eddy, Winchester.

Father and Son Are Acquitted

Pair Now Face Trial on Charge of Killing Girl's Father.

Wytheville, Va., April 27 (Spl.). Henry F. Bausell, Lebanon publisher, and his son, Bernace Bausell, were found not guilty today by a jury in the Wythe County Circuit Court on an indictment alleging the murder of Mrs. Virginia Cornett Bausell, estranged wife of the son, January 13.

Mrs. Russell was shot to death in an altercation at the home of T. Eugene Cornett, of Rural Retreat, her father, during a visit when reconciliation of the Bausells was being discussed.

Immediately following the return of the verdict, Judge Horace Sutherland ordered a new venire of 50 men summoned for next Tuesday, when the Bausells will go on trial on a charge alleging that they killed Cornett.

Outstanding among the defense testimony introduced was the testimony of three ballistics experts that they were convinced that the bullet which killed Mrs. Bausell was not fired from the guns used by her husband and the latter's father.

Young G.O.P. Club Acts Independently

St. Marys Members Split With State Group.

Leonardtown, Md., April 27 (Spl.). Announcement is made by the newly elected president of the Young Republican Club of St. Marys County that it will act independently of the State Young Republican Club and support the central committee of the Republican party.

Vice presidents have been elected for each of the nine districts of St. Marys County and plans are being made for an intensive drive during the summer for victory in the fall elections.

B. B. Love, jr., is president of the St. Marys County Republican Club having been elected at the last meeting, when it was decided to break with the Young Republicans of the State group.

Girl Finds Father Dying From Shot

Lovettsville, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Harry McGaha, 57, a laborer, was found in bed at his home near Lovettsville today with a self-inflicted shotgun wound in his abdomen.

His 21-year-old daughter, hearing the shot, rushed to her father's room and found him dying. He lived only a few minutes.

According to reports, McGaha had been in bad health for some time. County Coroner John A. Gibson issued a certificate of suicide. McGaha is survived by his wife, who was Miss Addie Brislin; a son and a daughter.

Miss Kelsey Dies In Shepherdstown

Shepherdstown, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Miss Elen Martha Kelsey, teacher for more than 50 years in public schools here, who died Wednesday after an illness of several months, were held today from the Lutheran Church.

The Rev. John Fray conducted the rites. Interment was in Elmwood Cemetery. Until Miss Kelsey's illness she had continued her activity in school and church affairs. She was 81 years old. She had no direct survivors, being the last of her family.

Peery Cheers For New Deal

Governor on Norfolk Visit Says Virginia Business Shows Increase.

Norfolk, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Gov. Peery, who spoke yesterday at exercises held in commemoration of the landing of the first settlers at Cape Henry, left today for Richmond, predicting better times for Virginia under the "New Deal."

He said business in Verginia has shown a steady increase the past six months. Unemployment had been reduced, he stated, and from all sections he gets reports of improved conditions generally.

The Governor said he had not had time to name a milk control board, whose first duty will be to attempt to end a price war in Portsmouth.

Gov. Peery was a surprise guest last night at the annual dinner of the Coal Merchants Service Bureau, Inc., composed of Norfolk coal merchants, at the Norfolk Country Club.

Owning extensive coal properties, Gov. Peery told the coal men, the New Deal would help the industry greatly in the long run, and that the best prospects lay in reasonable profit and closer cooperation between mine owners.

Prison Preferred: Wages Higher Than Correction House

Cumberland, Md., April 27 (Spl.).—After being sentenced yesterday to two years in the House of Correction for the unauthorized use of an automobile, Andrew Robinson, colored, asked Judge Albert A. Doub to change the sentence to the penitentiary, and the court obliged.

Robinson explained that in the House of Correction he would not be able to earn as much as in the penitentiary.

There were two charges of appropriating the use of cars against Robinson. He admitted he had been convicted in Washington, D. C., on a similar charge.

Six Virginia State Banks Are Restricted

Richmond, April 27 (AP).—Only six of the 199 State banks in Virginia are now under restriction, the banking division of the State corporation commission said today. One of this half-dozen is undergoing liquidation.

The restricted banks were expected to reach a permanent basis within a few months and several were expected to resume normal operations or merge with other institutions. Officials said the banking condition in Virginia is considerably better than in many States.

Virginia PWA Officials To Attend Conference

Richmond, April 27 (AP).—Orders came today from the PWA authorities in Washington for Col. James A. Anderson, State public works administration engineer, and Norton L. Wallerstein, legal adviser for the State PWA, to attend a conference of officials from various States May 14 and 15 in Chicago.

The conference will answer general and specific questions arising about PWA projects and the National officials will discuss many problems and matters of importance relating to the PWA.

Fiddlers Offer Ancient Tunes At Music Fete

Audience Hears Ballads Brought From England by Pioneers.

(Several pictures by Marion Butler of features in the three-day Virginia State Choral Festival will appear in tomorrow's edition of The Post.)

By Lee Hawkins.

Charlottesville, Va., April 27.—Melodies which have echoed across Virginia's mountains for generations echoed over the University of Virginia campus this afternoon, the second day of the Virginia State Choral Festival, while tonight an appreciative audience heard the Old Harp Singers of Nashville, Tenn., present folk hymns, carols and ancient "fuguing" tunes from the old Southern hymnals.

The afternoon program showed listeners that Virginia is probably richer than any other State in English ballads, brought over here by the early settlers. It introduced many "new" airs collected from folk musicians, unique and amusingly titled. They were rendered by country fiddlers, many coming from remote parts of the Blue Ridge and Appalachian ranges.

John Powell, Virginia's internationally known pianist and composer, made an introductory talk on how folk music has come down to the present generation.

"Hell Broke Loose."

The program included such songs as "Hell Broke Loose in Georgia," "Seven Joys of Mary," "The Demon Lover," "Courtin' Sally Brown" and "The Jolly Hollow Reel."

The opening number was a Dorian tune, "Awake, Awake," by Lloyd Fitzgerald. J. B. Wells fiddled "Natchez-on-the-Hill" and "Beaver Dam." Mrs. Victoria Morris followed with "Jack Went a-Sailing," which musicians claim is a splendid example of mixolydian air. Wilbur Maupin, with his banjo, rendered the ever popular "Mississippi Sawyer" and "John Hardy."

"Lord Thomas and Fair Ellender" was interpreted by Horton Barker, a winner at the White Top festival last year, and next came W. E. Dale, with his dulcimer, to play "Walking in the Parlor." Mrs. Eunice Yates McAlexander, a winner at the Patrick County Folk Festival, won applause with her rendition of "Three Little Babes," and C. B. Wohlford followed with two numbers, "Jennie Put the Kettle On," and "A Fiddle of a Dram."

The Shenandoah Mountaineers, prize winners at the Massanetta Festival, played the "Flop Eared Mule," clog dancers adding much to the effectiveness of the number, and Abner Keesee, another winner at the White Top Festival, played "Far Fan'l Town," and "The Little Fisherman Girl."

White Top Winner Plays.

An Aeolian or Dorian tune, "Lady of the Lake," was rendered by Fiddler John Morris, who won honors at the White Top and Massanetta festivals; Mrs. Kit Williamson played "The Two Sisters," and J. H. Chisholm, who also won a prize at White Top, followed with "Haste to the Wedding" and "Fine Times at Our House," and, accompanied by Mrs. Bettie Smith, gave a fiddle duet, "Flowers of Edinburgh." John M. Hunt played "Santa Anna" and "Haul Away, My Johnny-O," both chanty songs.

Musicians and dancers from Nelson and Albemarle Counties brought down the house with a square dance, the music provided by the Schuyler Band.

A medley of old favorites concluded the afternoon's program, the numbers being "Sourwood Mountain," "Arkansas Traveler," "Luck Chewed Tobacco and the "Goose Drank Wine," "Crippled Creek," "Cacklin' Hen," "The Cruel Mother," "Bound for the Rio Grande," "The Farmer's Curst Wife," "Liverpool Hornpipe," "The Turkish Rabalee," "Devilish Mary," "Lord Bateman" and "Indian Warwhoop."

"Old Harp" music, a type of song which has thousands of followers throughout the South and about which little has been known until recent years by the professional musical world, was presented tonight by a musical organization headed by Dr. George P. Jackson, of Vanderbilt University. The singers were Mary Cornelia Malone and Glenn Carroll, sopranos; Daisy Fentress and Arlene Richardson, altos; Claude Sharpe and Rexford Keller, tenors, and Dr. Jackson and Eugene Bugg, basses.

1,000-Voice Chorus Today.

The program opened with two early American "guguing" tunes, "Evening Shade" and "Mount Pleasant," and was followed by two spiritualized folk tunes in their original settings, "War Department" and "Mississippi."

Part two included "All Is Well," arranged by Powell; "Alabama," by Buchanan; "Morning Trumpet" and "Poor Wayfaring Stranger," by Keller, and "Bound for the Kingdom," by Powell.

Other selections on the program were "Mary Went A-Journeying," "Jesus Born in Bethlea," "Hebrew Children," "Wondrous Love," 'Babe of Bethlehem," "Gypsy Laddies," "Oh, Soldier, Won't You Marry Me," "Brother Green" and "Santy Anna," the last two arranged by Buchanan.

Twenty-four Virginia choruses of some 1,000 voices are to unite tomorrow afternoon in singing the requiem composed by Johannes Brahms. The singing of this mass will be conducted by Dr. T. Tertius Noble, of New York, and will be accompanied by the National Symphony Orchestra, directed by Dr. Hans Kindler. Soloists will be Miss Constance Wardle, soprano, Staunton, and Raimonde Aubrey, barytone, Danville.

The closing concert of the festival will be given at 8 p. m. tomorrow in Memorial Gymnasium, by the National Symphony.

Blossoms Open As Winchester Gets Fete Dress

Ideal Weather and Record Crowd Forecast for Week.

(In the rotogravure section of The Washington Post tomorrow there will appear two pages of photographs on the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, to be held Thursday and Friday at Winchester, Va.)

By C. B. Carr.

Winchester, Va., April 27.—Winchester today began putting on its holiday dress of pink, green and white preparatory to the advent of apple blossom week Sunday, when the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival on Thursday and Friday will again glorify the blossoming of 11,000,000 apple trees in the Shenandoar-Potomac-Cumberland region of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

With ideal weather forecast by the United States Weather Bureau, festival authorities predicted that the attendance at next week's fete would eclipse the all-time high of 150,000 persons who witnessed the 1933 festival.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Llangollen, near Upperville, internationally known sportswoman, will be crowned Queen Shenandoah XI on the esplanade of Handley High School Thursday afternoon. Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, will place the crown on her head.

Air Carries Invitation.

A personal invitation from the queen to attend the fete was recently tendered in a Nation-wide radio hook-up.

"Search the world over," said Mrs. Whitney, "and you could never find a more appropriate place for holding such a celebration. Winchester will be having an open house for all. I hope that everyone who can will come. You will like it."

Following the coronation of Mrs. Whitney, 1,100 school children of Winchester public schools will present a pageant, "The Spirit of the Years," in her honor. The pageant will be repeated Friday morning for the benefit of festival visitors.

The festival will officially open Thursday morning, when 3,000 school children, garbed in gay holiday attire, will parade. That night, the firemen of Winchester will present a "fun parade," in which they have invited firemen of Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania to participate.

Grand Parade Friday.

Winchester's festival will come to a glamorous climax Friday afternoon when Queen Shenandoah will ride in triumph through the streets of Winchester in the grand feature parade, "The Trail of the Pink Petals." Her chariot will be drawn by four dapple gray Percheron horses from the Whitney Stables, and her majesty will be attended by 29 college girls as princesses of the court.

Friday night, the Queen's Ball will bring the festival to a conclusion. Both Thursday and Friday night, there will be balls here and in nearby halls for festival visitors.

The 11,000,000 apple trees of the region today began putting out their pink and white clusters. Horticulturalists predict that the trees will be in full bloom for the festival.

Plans for the grand feature parade indicated that it would be the finest in the history of the fete. A special detail of the Piedmont Hunt, of Upperville, Va., of which Mrs. Whitney is a member, will attend her as special escort in full hunting fixture. Historical scenes will be enacted, with a majority of the participants mounted. The demand for horses for participants in the parade has increased, and stables in this section have been requested to loan every available horse.

Role of Calvert Filled in Pageant

W. G. Fenwick to Appear in St. Marys Cast.

Leonardtown, Md., April 27 (Spl.). William G. Fenwick, descendent of a noted colonial family, has been selected to play the role of Leonard Calvert in the pageant, "St. Marys, the Mother of Maryland," to be given at St. Marys City June 16. Mr. Fenwick is head of the St. Marys County Chapter, Knights of Columbus.

School children will take part in Indian scenes. The cast will include 500 residents of the county.

Radio Waves and Ripples

"MISS you excruciatingly. Love. Harold."

Without going into the metrits of the question of transmitting lavish endearments by radio or telegraph, we should say that May 9 between 3 and 3:30 p. m. would be an exceedingly poor time for Harold to send a message like that, even if he can spell "excruciatingly."

For on that date and at that time Columbia is trying a variation of its current propensity for world communication broadcasts—a pick-up of all radiograms transmitted or received by R. C. A. in this country.

THERE isn't much use for people in Washington, except President Roosevelt and a few others perhaps, to go to New York for Mr. Roosevelt's review of the fleet May 31.

For N. B. C. and Columbia have summoned the cream of their reporting announcers and have arranged with the Navy Department for views of the parade from every conceivable vantage point.

Both National and C. B. S. will have men and equipment on the bridge of the Indianapolis with the President, and in Navy blimps or airplanes the radiomen will have a look at the Nation's sea power from the air.

Other vantage points: the Saratoga, the California and Riverside Drive — N. B. C.; the Louisville and Battery Park — C. B. S.

Broadcast times: 11:45 a. m. (N. B. C.) and 11 a. m. (C. B. S.)

Two-thirds of N. B. C.'s Young Artists Trio are Sylvia Altman and her brother, Julius.

Washingtonians who labored with little inspiration in Central High School a few years ago may recall Sylvia with a pardonable twinge of envy as the young lady who was so unorthodox as to require only two years to complete Caesar's accounts of his military prowess and all the other elements of adolescent education.

They may recall that even then Sylvia's piano playing promised big things. They may recall, too, that Julius wasn't doing very badly with a violin, either.

The Young Artists Trio isn't exactly "big things." But it has paid for Sylvia's acquisition of an M. A. at Columbia. And music teachers of both Sylvia and Julius talk excitedly of their future.

Next network job for the Young Artists Trio will be a Mother's Day program May 9.

Getting personal. . . .

Arturo Toscanini, after closing the season with the Philharmonic tomorrow, will board the Ile de France for a fortnight's vacation and two concerts in Paris . . . Jeannie Lang was offered a ticket to her own broadcast at the door of Columbia's Playhouse the other evening . . . the enterprising speculator was 8 years old . . . his price—a quarter . . . Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit have broadcast requests for the names of shut-in and invalid fans throughout the country . . . the names should go to the Florists Telegraph Association which will distribute flowers to them June 10 without charge . . . Tony Wons and the piano team of Keenan and Phillips are billed for the Fox the week of May 6 . . . Andre Kostelanetz has cheer for opera haters . . . he says: "Quite a few highly revered operas aren't any better basically than many so-called popular American songs. Take them apart and you will find that they are merely native street songs disguised in elaborate orchestral dress" . . . Grete Stueckgold, Rose Ponselle Nino Martini now are required to stand at least six feet from the microphone while broadcasting . . . just to make sure they don't vibrate themselves off the air . . . although there will be only ten men in the orchestra, Frank Novak will direct a 40-piece band when he starts a new commercial on C. B. S. May 7 . . . Frank will play the other 30 instruments . . . Reggie Childs and his band are to be heard on N. B. C. three nights a week for the duration of the summer.

Presidential Royalties.

How much does the President get for writing a book? One would expect that he would be pretty highly paid for this kind of work, especially as no other citizen of the United States is able to command such Nation-wide and front-page publicity. But it appears that the President, contrary to public expectations, receives much less for his literary output than many a relatively unadvertised scribe.

Senator Schall, of Minnesota, is responsible for this revelation of what the public, in cash terms, thinks of Mr. Roosevelt as a writer. He estimated, the Saturday Review of Literature reports, that "Looking Forward," if sold at $5 a copy, should have netted the President $1,000,000. And that would be pretty good pay for a collection of speeches and an introduction. No question; but it is to be remembered that royalty checks do not flow to authors with quite the same celerity as those of the AAA to Western wheat farmers.

The President's first book was sold at $2.50 a copy, not $5 as Senator Schall said. And according to the Saturday Review, its sales did not exceed 50,000 copies. That would hardly put it on the best seller list. The royalties paid the President, the same magazine reveals, was 15 per cent, not 40, as the Senator reported. And so it seems that all Mr. Roosevelt got for "Looking Forward," at a generous estimate and with no allowance for charges, was $18,750. A nice sum, but a long way from that mythical million.

Germany Rejects.

Those who believe that Germany is not undisposed to use force to alter treaty settlements will find confirmation of that opinion in Berlin's refusal to cooperate with Russia in a joint guarantee of the independence of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia. The recent correspondence between Moscow and Berlin, as now made public, clearly indicates that the Nazi government has no desire to give such a pledge.

Two major points are made by the German foreign office in putting forward its reasons for rejection. The one is that Russia earlier made similar overtures to Poland, which were interpreted in Berlin as having an anti-German bias. The other point is found in the assertion that since no threat to the independence of the Baltic states is at present apparent, there is no occasion for the projected pact.

Neither of these arguments is convincing. Since nonaggression treaties are effective in proportion to the number of signatories, it is difficult to see why Germany could properly be offended by a treaty between Poland and Russia in behalf of the Baltic states. On the contrary, offense would seem legitimate only if Germany harbored designs against the independence of these little countries, and regarded a Polish-Russian treaty as hostile to such designs. The other argument is even more specious. For it amounts to saying that there is no sense in taking out insurance if the contingency insured against is not immediate.

In her seemingly sincere efforts to stabilize peace on her frontiers Russia has recently met rebuffs from both Japan and Germany. In those rebuffs is found the underlying reason for the growing rapprochement between Moscow and Geneva, now at a stage where predictions of eventual Russian membership in the League, from which Japan and Germany have withdrawn, no longer seem far-fetched.

A Dead Dog Lives.

A research professor at the University of California killed a dog a few days ago. Yesterday the animal was sitting up and taking a little nourishment. Reports from his bedside were to the effect that he "was doing as well as could be considered." Had such an event occurred a couple of hundred years ago, the professor would have been hanged as a witch. The fact that his experiment is today heralded round the world we look upon as proof of our enlightenment and civilization.

But an examination of the nature of the experiment shows that, while unusual, no miracle was involved. The dog was killed by suffocation, cause of many technological deaths and cause also of what we call drowning. The doctor making the experiment holds no claim to discovery of an elixir mixed from the waters of the spring of eternal life. His only claim is that through his method, life may be restored to healthy individuals who, through accident, have been smothered to death. This is but a step beyond the inhalator, in common use, and the drug adrenalin, which has been used to keep hearts working when otherwise they would have stopped.

When age and strain or disease have weakened the tissues, it is doubtful if any scientific means will bring back life. For this reason few will be awe-stricken with supernatural terror at the phenomenon. Thus far the real failure of the experiment lies in the admission that, while the dog lives again physically, his brain appears to have been injured. Without full use of brain, mere physical life is to be deplored. And so until science can make brain function after death, as well as heart beat and lungs breathe, there seems to be little advancement after all in the "miracle" of Berkeley.

An Inadequate Defense.

The Senate report on the stock exchange bill is a persuasive presentation of the case for Federal control over organized speculation. It also is intended to be a reply to critics who have maintained that the bills introduced into the House and Senate have transcended the limits of bona fide regulation in the provisions for corporate reporting. As is so often the case of late, an effort has been made to discredit the critics by hinting that they are either deluded victims of mischievous propaganda or persons who fear exposure of damaging secrets.

Neither line of defense meets the critics on tenable ground. It is a work of supererogation to prove the need of governmental regulation to curb speculative abuses. Few opponents of the proposed legislation would deny the necessity; they are concerned solely to secure a type of regulation both suitable and effective. Already their constructive suggestions have led to modification of the House and the Senate bills. The Senate bill in particular has been improved by the elimination of fixed margin requirements and by vesting control in an independent body instead of the Federal Trade Commission. To the extent that changes have been made in the original bill, progress has been favorable. However, many objectionable features in form and in substance have been retained which should be condemned. The Senate Committee's report is designed to disarm critics, but it is unconvincing.

The changes already made—desirable though they are—have not been sufficiently thoroughgoing to remove legitimate fears that the proposed legislation might serve as an entering wedge to establish far-reaching Federal control over private industry. The Senate report asserts that the Fletcher bill furnishes no justification for such an interpretation and in support of this denial notes that the Commission would be given discretion to exempt securities from the operations of most sections of the act, including those dealing with corporate reports.

Replying to the objection that the reporting system would put a severe burden upon many corporations by forcing them to keep their accounts in a manner prescribed by the Commission, it is said that the bill merely permits the Commission to specify the methods to be followed in preparing reports. Since the character of the report might necessitate changes in accounting practice, however, this defense will not be taken very seriously. It appears, too, that great importance is attached to Section 13 (d) of the bill which specifically provides that nothing in the act shall be construed to authorize interference with the management of corporate affairs.

A declaratory generalization of this sort is obviously without force in face of the impressive mass of detailed regulations prescribing the methods to be followed. Governmental regulatory bodies are more apt to exceed the limits of authority than to refrain from exercising powers specifically granted to them. This is particularly true if discretionary departures from a general rule are regarded as special exceptions, as is the case with the registration provisions of the Fletcher bill.

In order to be effective, regulatory laws must under all circumstances be administered by competent officials. But even highly qualified individuals are hampered by the practice of "cluttering up" regulatory statutes with detailed instructions concerning methods of procedure. The innumerable specific prohibitions and the inquisitorial registration requirements of the stock exchange bills largely account for the hostile reception accorded them by critics who fully concur in the thesis that control over organized speculation is essential.

Regulation must be flexible in order to be efficient. If regulatory bodies are fettered by legislative dictation, their usefulness is impaired and their opportunities to work positive harm are increased. It is curious that this is not realized by the Administration in the case of the stock exchange bill. For the flexibility argument is the one which is being stressed most strongly in the pending tariff legislation.

A Proper First Step.

Back in 1892 Congress passed an act making it unlawful to fly a kite over any street or public place "in the cities of Washington and Georgetown." Doubtless this statute was forgotten long ago, but it is still law in the District. An act of Congress would be required to modify it. In spite of the fact that Congress is overburdened by momentous National and international issues, it still holds the responsibility for deciding whether or not kites may be flown in the District of Columbia.

Specific ordinance-making powers have been granted to the District Commissioners in certain fields. For example: They make police regulations, control places of amusement, fix water rates, regulate the height of buildings, &c. Various commissions also have ordinance-making powers pertaining to their respective functions. But the vast reservoir of undefined powers is retained by Congress. Matters outside of the restricted authority specifically granted the Commissioners must be submitted to Congress whether they be important policies or trivial details.

A bill now favorably reported by the Senate District Committee would considerably extend the power of the Commissioners over routine municipal functions. It appears to be a proper step in the direction of concentrating authority in the hands of those who have direct responsibility. But it might well go further than it does. There seems to be no good reason why full ordinance-making powers should not be exercised by the Commissioners under general policies laid down by Congress.

The possibility that such authority would be abused is negligible. Under any circumstances Congress would retain power to set aside ordinances that might not meet with its approval. In the meantime, community service would not be hampered by the tedious delay resulting when local bills are caught in the perpetual legislative jam on Capitol Hill. Because of the limited time it has for consideration of District measures, Congress should be as anxious as are the people of Washington to have the powers of the Commissioners strengthened.

Up To The President.

Disregard of the merit system in building up the vast organizations which are carrying on the New Deal is becoming one of the sharpest issues which the Administration must face. Vigorous criticism of this policy has come from many diverse sources during the last year. Mild protests are now being made from within Government circles.

In an address at Boston Leonard D. White, of the Civil Service Commission, declared that "the time will soon be upon us when we shall have to reconsider the whole position of the 'New Deal' organizations." He quite properly observes that some of these agencies are passing from a temporary to a permanent classification. "It is unthinkable," he says, "that in the long run these exceedingly powerful agencies of Government can be left without the protection of the merit system."

A few hours before this address was made Congress sent to the President a bill that will keep the Home Owners Loan Corporation open to the spoilsmen, in spite of the fact that officials are resorting to criminal prosecutions to rid that agency of graft and corruption. Senator Norris' amendment requiring appointments to be made on the basis of merit and efficiency was finally voted down in both houses. Congress is making a mockery of the "planned economy" about which Administration spokesmen talk so glibly.

The full responsibility for this absurd incongruity, however, does not rest upon Congress. Several months ago the President instructed Postmaster General Farley to prepare a bill to extend civil service regulations to first, second and third class postmasters. But it appears that Mr. Farley has been so busy appointing politicians to these offices, that he has not had time to comply with the President's request. At any rate no such legislation has been prepared by the Postoffice Department. Since Congress is already beginning a drive for adjournment, there is little possibility that this highly desirable reform can be effected at this session. Indeed, with Congress in the grip of the spoilsmen and the Administration taking an apathetic attitude, extension of the merit system is beyond even optimistic expectations.

President Roosevelt usually supports the merit system when the issue is placed before him, but even his zeal for "economic planning" has not prompted him to take an emphatic stand against the encroachment of patronage. If the President wants to make an issue of this vital question, he could veto the HOLC bill. He could prod Mr. Farley and make the postmaster bill an "Administration measure." It is very evident that unless the President makes a fight to preserve and extend the merit system the spoilsmen will continue to make a painful joke of the "planned economy" program.

Sanctity Of Treaties.

The American Society of International Law is holding its annual meeting in Washington at a time when the reality of that field of jurisprudence is being severely tested. Quite a number of interesting subjects have been discussed at the current sessions. Various specific problems growing out of international relations have been elucidated. Today the conference will listen to a report of the committee on codification of international law. While all of these reports and treatises have their significance, one can hardly think of international law today without coming face to face with the major issue of its enforcement.

International law consists of treaties, agreements, conventions and doctrines adopted to govern the conduct of nations in their dealings with one another. It has grown up chiefly with the consent of the nations affected by its obligations. It is effective only in so far as sovereign governments abide by its provisions. Consequently, when any nation takes upon itself the sole responsibility of interpreting treaties and agreements, or of openly violating them, the whole foundation upon which international law rests is violently shaken. In other words, when treaties lose their sanctity international law becomes merely academic.

Virtually all nations have given attention to the development of international law in recent years, for they realize that much of the world's hope for peace is based on clarification of international rights and obligations. Established rules of conduct help to eliminate friction between nations, as between individuals, and to place rational adjudication ahead of war as a means of settling disputes. Indeed, the development of rules and laws that can be recognized by all powers appears to be the only means of incorporating the concepts of civilization into international dealings. But, of course, if these undertakings can be flouted with impunity when they stand in the way of national ambitions, they become meaningless.

Japan has thrust the question of the sanctity of treaties into every foreign office in the world. All other problems of international law are today overshadowed by the implications of her recent manifesto. Can treaties be enforced? As yet the world has no machinery to guarantee that international law will really have the force which makes national law effective. Just how that machinery can be devised is far from clear. But it is a challenge that the world can not afford to ignore.

Intra-Party Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One can readily account for even a poignant desire on the part of more than one Republican besides Senators Norris and Moses for Postmaster General Farley's resignation as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. It will be admitted that there never was, and perhaps never will be, another such for either foreplanning or forecasting happy results. Therefore, it seems logical that his party's desire to retain him would be as intense as the Republicans' is to see him removed.

Then why this persistent intra-party propaganda to find a substitute? This is being said at the imminent risk of a display of dense ignorance, nevertheless, it is said, and can not be retracted until Mr. Farley himself says he can no longer serve as his party's chairman. GEO. E. GARY.

Flexible "Regimentation."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been much interested recently in the flexibility of the word "regimentation." I never realized that it referred to every form of liberty we of the United States have enjoyed. When we had the Boston Tea Party it was a regimentation; also when Lincoln secured personal liberty for the Negroes that was regimentation; when the Constitution was signed that also was a regimentation of all personal freedom—at least I learn this from all the recent speeches and writings of the so-called Democrats.

Imperialism and the New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As far as American institutions are concerned the New Deal is suicide. It means the abolishing of local self-government and States' rights, the surrender of all the ideals of liberty for which our fathers fought and died, and the end of freedom in America.

The New Deal is madness, and if it is to be continued, personal liberty must go, self-government must go, independent State government must go, and even the United States must go to give place to a centralized imperial despotism; nothing else is possible. And yet they call themselves Democrats!

DAVID I. JAYNES.

Cherry Blossom Ballyhoo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the cherry blossoms have survived all of this year's ballyhoo I have a couple of suggestions for a bigger and better demonstration next season, which in some way seems to have been overlooked by the master military minds that organized the recent spectacles.

One is for a parade of armored tanks with machine guns trained on the blossoms. The other is for naval maneuvers of battleships in the Potomac, culminating in a grand finale of a smoke screen to completely obliterate the quiet natural loveliness of the flowering trees themselves, a result that was only incompletely achieved by this year's various devices. THERESA RUSSELL.

Washington, April 26.

Solving the Traffic Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The traffic problem will be solved when we get rid of the street cars! How long must the automobile owners put up with the continued abuse of traffic "experts" who strive to eliminate means for the fastest growing utility—the automobile?

Automobiles have supplanted antiquated transportation and it is about time that some traffic genius realizes that the motor car must be recognized as a necessity. Progress must make more room for it.

Human life is endangered every time a person attempts to board a street car. A motor bus rolls up to the curb and can be boarded in safety. If a motor bus breaks down, it can be rolled around a corner out of the heavy flow of traffic, but if a street car breaks down, traffic is blocked and tied up over a great area.

We are forced to tear up sidewalks and destroy lovely trees to make more room for automobiles, but street cars clutter our thoroughfares and their dangerous, slippery tracks occupy one-third of the space that is needed for motor traffic.

The busiest streets are bottlenecked with abominable street car platforms that narrow traffic lanes. Consider the hazard of two street car platforms paralleled on F street at Fourteenth. Consider all the dangers that would be eliminated if the mopey, noisy, dilatory street cars were replaced by motor coaches. EUGENE L. FLYNN.

Washington, April 25.

What! No Shirt?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is one thing missing in the revelations of Brother Wirt concerning the dark, dismal and depraved conspiracy to overthrow this free, noble and harmonious democracy. A shirt is not mentioned. All conspirators in all conspiracies worthy of the profound attention of our newspapers have a shirt, wear a shirt and swear the oath of allegiance on the tail of a shirt. Not an ordinary shirt, 'tis true, but a sacred shirt. A shirt whate'er its color—be it black, brown or blue—is a badge of freedom, a hope of glory and the means of a lot of free publicity.

That is when it is worn by a conspirator. Hence this humble scribe respectfully submits for the consideration of the Tugwellites the selection of a shirt of suitable color, shape and material that all may recognize the new saviors of our country.

CHARLES H. STEWART.

Akron, Ohio, April 23.

How We Handle Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Did you ever stop to think of what a helpless and deplorable situation the people of Washington, D. C. are in? Besides being browbeaten and poorly governed by an incompetent and political-minded Congress we are forced to acept the service of a miserable newspaper bureaucracy. Five daily newspapers are printed for us to read every day . . .

Recently The Post made a valiant effort to purify itself and has made a commendable effort to lift itself out of the mire. However, it is a long way yet from being out of the woods, as I can testify by its method of handling a criticism of the New Deal which I made recently. The Post held up my article over three weeks and consulted the A. B. C. Board regarding the charges of usurpation which I made against it and then printed after my article a justification of the board's findings.

I still maintain that an honest and unbiased investigation of all facts will sustain my contention that the A. B. C. Board has overriden the emphatic and oft-repeated wish of President Roosevelt, the Seventy-third Congress and about 90 per cent of the property holders, who live in their own property, within a radius of 600 feet of 1330 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, also, that the selling value of property in residential and semiresidential sections all over Washington has depreciated anywhere from 20 to 25 per cent in value or more by the promiscuous granting of licenses to over 1,000 saloons, whereby the rate of drunkenness and disorderly conduct has increased many hundred per cent.

C. G. DEGMAN.

Washington, April 24.

On Reality.

The following letter was written by the late Gamaliel Bradford, the biographer, to Mr. V. F. Calverton, editor of the Modern Monthly. It is reprinted from the Atlantic Monthly for May, where it originally appeared.

I was much delighted with the wisdom and reasonableness of your discussion of Reality in the Monthly. Certainly few human beings can have known more about the 30 years' battle with Reality than I did, and I think the elements of that contention are as vital in me today as they were 30 years ago. It is a splendid, fruitful process to go through, and spirits who have known it are the ones that have the power and the incentive for renovating the world. But your point that in the end what counts is not the blind and fruitless warfare, not the futile and evanescent scolding, but the creative acceptance of Reality as a fact and the persistent, unfaltering effort to do something about it and with it, is certainly the wise one to arrive at and the one that all the young and ardent and passionate spirts need to have dinned into them with ceaseless iteration.

For myself the—purely personal—tragedy is that I have never succeeded in getting beyond the attitude of understanding Reality without the faintest power or perhaps even disposition to endeavor to modify or ameliorate it. I cannot quarrel with Reality any longer, though heaven knows no one is better aware of its defects. I simply accept it as an overwhelming fact and confront it and probe it to its very subtlest depths, as far as I possibly can, with a limitless curiosity and a vague dilettante enjoyment. But as for any attempt to mend it or adjust it or improve it, I feel myself utterly unequal to the task. In all the 30 years of my literary activity, which has been considerable of its kind, I painfully feel that I have not advanced the cause of humanity one inch or done any conceivable thing to make the world in any way better. All I have done is to ask questions, and though asking questions has a certain clarifying value, it has also the forlorn defect that any fool can do it.

The intimate study that I have been making this past year of the men who have bitten into Reality with passionate vigor and earnestness, the Lenins, the Mussolinis, the Roosevelts, the Wilsons, the Fords, the Edisons, has dizzied and dazed me with the sense of what such creatures have and I have not.

They act. They make mistakes, they expose themselves to endless criticism, they tear down when they should build up and build up frail edifices that they themselves know well can never stand. But at least they act. They take Reality as it is, and mold it and twist it and show its endless possibilities, and set their impress on it somehow, for good or evil; and when they have done, Reality at least knows that they have existed and bears witness to their vital force.

Whereas to me action is a terror. I want to understand Reality, but perhaps, after all, we cannot understand it without actually dealing with it. When we try merely to visualize it, to portray, to delineate all its subtle elements and fleeting moments, we find that, after all, it has eluded us, and we are punished for our cowardice and fatal delinquency by finding that there is no Reality in all this limitless universe exeept ourselves and that that is the most unreal entity of the whole lot.

So the real lesson is precisely what you preach, that we must either wage a blind battle with Reality nor indulge ourselves in the futile though endlessly amusing observation of it. We must make something of it, at the risk of making fools of ourselves if we attempt it, and vain and futile shadows if we do not.

The Post Impressionist

"But Is It Art?"

Postoffice, Saturday.

TWO challenges have been provoked by our Thursday's intimation that James Joyce might be neither romanticist nor realist:

"What, then, is Realism?"

"How do you define Romance?"

In this Column we may sometimes inadvertently issue a challenge; we never accept one. To the present pair a wise reply travels the safe highroad of reflection and quotation.

When we Americans ceased to be readers of literature, we took criticism as a substitute—and took it too seriously. People believed in it, only to believe that it was too much for them. They got rid of Henry James to please Henry Mencken—and chose Zane Gray to please themselves.

Bewilderment followed. Privately, men asked whether they were living in a world or a motion-picture. Publicly they admired, at second hand, the originality of "Babbitt" and "A Good Woman," if the New York Nation told them to. But they called these novels "echoes," if the London Nation hinted that Sinclair Lewis and Louis Bromfield would never have written them had not H. G. Wells written "Mr. Polly" and "The New Machiavelli" several years before.

The American was considerably disturbed. He was called upon to rejoice with Dr. Canby in the emergence of an American School in Fiction, while he was called upon to mourn with Dr. Perry at the European imitativeness of that American School. He was disturbed. Yet, while he went on reading Zane Gray in private, he somehow managed in public to cheer with the one doctor and weep with the other.

It is only now that realization begins to dawn. It is only now—when a French critic can think of William Faulkner as a humorist and a German critic can call "Work of Art" an allegory—that our unhappy nation entertains some doubt as to whether criticism is static.

As a matter of fact, criticism is not static. Nor is it dynamic. It is not to be interpreted in terms of energy at all.

Criticism has its rival schools, just as much as the art it criticises. But it is individualistic. It is a point of view.

So there are always at least two broad definitions of romance and realism, each subject to personal subdivision: the definition of the realist and that of the romanticist. You know them both.

The realist says that realistic fiction must be true to life. The romanticist says no fiction can be. The realist says it can. The romanticist counters: "What is life?" To which, of course, there is no answer.

The romanticist says that romance must be true to dreams and hopes. The realist says, then romance is a lie. The romanticist counters: "What of it?" Whereto, of course, there can be no reply.

The realist asserts: Realism is honest art. It pictures life unadorned: look at Dreiser. Romance is a sentimental quack-medicine: look at "Anthony Adverse."

The romanticist asserts: Romance is the honest artistic portrayal of what mankind would like life to be: well, look at "Anthony Adverse!" If realism is true to life, what's "An American Tragedy"? It is the greatest novel of sentimentality since "Pendennis."

But there is a third definition, truly broader in the sense of being more catholic. It was once drawn for our zealously realistic eye of youth by a now almost forgotten—and quite undeservedly forgotten—romancer. Richard Harding Davis said:

"I think the difference between a good reporter and a good novelist is a lot wider than the difference between a realistic novelist and a romantic novelist. A good reporter can make his readers see anything he has seen—that's journalism. But a good novelist can make his readers see something nobody has seen—and that's art.

"It's art," Davis continued, "no matter whether the thing described is possible or impossible. Perhaps it is greater art—it's certainly a greater trick—if the thing you are made to see is an impossible thing which you know all the time is impossible, yet which you are made to believe in spite of that knowledge. But it's art in either case."

We were passing Times Square.

"For instance," said Davis, "if I write a story about a shoestring-peddler who doesn't exist, and tell how he got drunk on his last cent, and lost his stock of shoestrings and had to choose between the Salvation Army Refuge and the Hudson River—and chose the river: if I write this and make you feel, while you're reading it, that it must have happened, that's art.

"On the other hand, if my story is about a pink caterpillar crossing Times Square under a miniature purple umbrella—and if even a child believes it while he's reading it, why, that's art, too.

"And I'm not sure that both cases aren't both romance and realism. No fiction is reporting. All fiction is invention. Reportorial fiction is a contradiction in terms. The most realistic novel isn't fact. The most that either a realist or a romancer can do is to make what he writes convincing. If the drunken peddler—who might have existed, but never did—seems real to you, he's a romantic success. And if the umbrella-carrying caterpillar—who never existed and never could—seems real to your child, he's a realistic triumph."

Which is another way of saying that reality is the heart of romanticism and romance is the essence of realism.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

THE professor, Mr. Tugwell, has run off again. There he is six or seven blocks down the street, way out in front of the rest of us. Why he isn't content to walk along leisurely with the crowd as we stroll away from the depression, I don't know. He isn't, though.

Ever since he joined us it has been his wont to run ahead and keep looking back to see if we were following. And every time he has had to stop and dejectedly retrace his steps. What he is trying to do, of course, is to get us started, to pep us up, to get us to running along with him. But manifestly he has too much youthful enthusiasm for the rest of us.

BARGERON.

* * * *

The amazing thing to me is that he never tires. Every now and then as we are walking nicely along he will jump up and ecstatically clap his hands and start running, turning back every 100 yards or so beseeching us to come on.

"Come on," he will say excitedly, "come on you all. Let's go." Invariably he will run several blocks before he realizes that we aren't going to follow him.

"Oh, why don't you all come on?" he asks impatiently when he rejoins the group, when he comes back to our slow step.

"Where is it you want to go?"

"To a more abundant life."

Even with that promised destination, however, the professor seems not to be able to quicken our stride. We just keep moseying along.

* * * *

But now he is off again. So far he hasn't even bothered to look back. His enthusiasm has carried him way down the street. He is headed for a new place this time. He is headed for a "realm of cooperative plenty." Hot dog! That's much better than a "more abundant life."

The truth is that if it were not for the fact that I am built for comfort instead of speed I would have joined him this time. As a matter of fact, I never wanted to go with anybody more in my life.

We had all been going along easily for more than a week. Then all of a sudden the professor clapped his hands through the medium of an article in Ray Moley's magazine, Today, and shouted: "Come on everybody," and started running.

There was something contagious about his enthusiasm this time.

"Where are you going?" we chorused as he got underway.

"Using the traditional methods of a free people," he said, "we are going forward toward a realm of cooperative plenty, the like of which the world has never seen."

Honestly, my body veered forward in desire to follow, but the old leaden feet held me back.

* * * *

Somehow I am afraid he isn't going to turn and rejoin us this time. He is running too fast. Why, already he is almost out of sight. He hasn't even turned back to see if we are following.

No sir; I am afraid he isn't coming back. There was something about him when he started this time, some indefinable happiness reflected in his face and his whole manner. Maybe he has decided to just run on ahead and get things fixed up for us when we get there in our slow way. Maybe we are nearer that "realm of cooperative plenty" than we know and the nearness made him impatient, like children who always pile out of the car before it stops and rush to the movie window.

Whatever it is, he is certainly moving. Boy, look at him! He is almost out of sight. I hope he doesn't turn a corner and cause the rest of us to lose our way.

He really ought to stop and come back, though. Senator Smith says he isn't going to let the bill giving him a salary raise pass.

Rural Activities Are Described

Program Presented at Woodstock Under Pastors' Group.

Woodstock, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—The "Rural Life Program," sponsored by the Woodstock Ministerial Association, opened last evening with "School and Community Night." Mrs. Carl Boyer, president of the Civic League, presided.

Tonight's program hinged around the rural life and the garden clubs. Speakers were Mrs. Douglas Dymock, president of Woodstock Garden Club; Miss Belle Burke district home demonstration agent, University of Virginia, and Prof. B. L. Hummel, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg. G. G. Dickenson, county agent, presided.

Sunday morning each church will have its own program. Sunday evening there will be community worship. The Rev. John B. Frantz will preside, the Music Lovers Club will be in charge of the music and Dr. T. B. Manny, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, will speak.

Bacon and Eggs Breaks Up Short CCC Food Strike

Waynesboro, Pa., April 27 (Spl.). Declaring the food served them was unfit to eat, 120 members of Company 307, Civilian Conservation Corps, at Old Forge, near here, went on a hunger strike which ended with bacon and eggs at breakfast yesterday.

The "hunger strike" lasted only one day. The CCC workers filed into mess hall, viewed the outlay, turned around and marched out. There were no threats of violence.

Capt. Wiester, commanding officer of the company, declared today that the food served the men was of the best. The officers claim they eat the same meals which are prepared for the workers.

Camp authorities launched an immediate investigation with the threat that the ringleaders of the strike will be discharged.

Swimming Pool Owner Is Sued for $10,000

Luray, Va., April 27 (Spl.). — J. B. Reynolds, of Shenandoah, filed suit for $10,000 against Harry Shuler, owner of a swimming pool eight miles south of Luray, for injuries Reynolds' 15-year-old son sustained last summer while bathing in the pool. Reynolds' suit alleges Shuler did not take precautions to safeguard patrons of his resort against accident. Reynolds says that his son slipped and fell in the pool, breaking his wrist and sustaining injuries that will make him deaf for life.

Church Plans Rites to Mark Anniversary

Hamburg Congregation to Observe 46th Year of Dedication.

Woodstock, Va., April 27 (Spl.). Prominent members of the Reformed Church from the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and adjacent sections will gather at St. John's Reformed Church, Hamburg, Sunday for the forty-fifth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the present church.

It was at St. John's that one of the first Reformed congregations of the Shenandoah Valley was formed in 1780.

The Rev. J. Silor Garrison, D. D., Harrisonburg, stated clerk of the Virginia Classis and a former pastor of St. John's, will preach the anniversary sermon. Other ministers who will take part include the Rev. J. P. Harner, Edinburg; the Rev. B. S. Dasher, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, Edinburg; the Rev. J. S. Stevens, Edinburg; the Rev. B. K. Shoffner, of Thomasville, N. C., and the Rev. O. B. Michael, S. T. D., pastor of St. John's.

During the day, the Madison District Sunday School Convention will also be held. The Rev. O. B. Michael and the Rev. J. S. Stevens will preach at the forenoon service, which will also include a special address by Prof. Charles H. Hoffman, of State Teachers College, Harrisonburg. In the afternoon the Rev. B. S. Dasher, Miss Maxine Coffman, Miss Arlene Didawick, Miss Eleanor Wrenn, the Rev. L. A. Racey, the Rev. R. L. Moore, the Rev. Minor C. Miller, the Jerome Double Quartet and the Union Forge Quartet will be heard.

Officers in charge of the Sunday School convention include Miss Evelyn Eckard, president; J. Frank Didawick, vice president, and Frank Wakeman, secretary-treasurer.

There will also be a meeting of the executive committee of the Shenandoah County Council of Religious Education in the afternoon. J. Leslie Saum is president of the council.

Church Memorial Window Smashed

Other Acts of Vandalism in Maryland Probed.

Eckhart, Md., April 27 (Spl.). Acts of vandalism are being investigated by State and county officers.

A memorial window at the Eckhart Baptist Church, on the National Highway, was smashed by a rock that is too heavy to be lifted by one person. A large window, a lock and a glass door in the store of Clarence Porter were smashed. Small windows in residences in that locality also were broken.

The vandals also visited Clarysville, one mile east of here and wrecked large canopy lights and windows at the garage of Russell McMurdo.

Driver Speeds On, His Truck Ablaze

White Sulphur, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—"Traveling like a house afire" is one way of describing a trip made by Earl Flack, of this town.

The journey ended four miles from Princeton, when the truck he was driving and its contents, a load of household goods, were destroyed by fire.

A strong head wind kept Flack from discovering his blazing cargo until he was warned by a passing motorist. The origin of the fire is not known.

Lexington Readopts Levy.

Lexington, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—The Lexington Town Council has readopted the 1933-34 tax levy for the fiscal year 1934-35. The levy is $1.90 on real estate and personal property and 80 cents on bank stock.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE COMMUTER'S AVOWAL.

You ask me if I love you much, my dear—
You wonder if the old affection clings?
If not would I come home these April nights
A-toting all these shrubs and garden things?

You wonder if my ardor hasn't cooled
And if you're not a habit now, mayhap?
Oh, if 'twere true would I come home each eve
With all these plants and bushes in my lap?

"Have wife and home become a commonplace?"
You ask in tones that sometimes seem to break;
If so would I fight fiercely through those trains
With spade, a hose, those hedge shears and a rake?

"Oh, do you love me still?" I hear you croon;
My darling were it otherwise would I
Endure these spring homecomings perilous
With hoe handles and weeders in my eye?

Am I fed up with this domestic life?
You want to know. Now listen well, my sweet;
If so would I sit hours in a coach
And with these garden gadgets share my seat?

Am I devoted as of old, you ask,
Complaining there is coolness in my hugs;
Devoted? Say, tonight I'm lugging home
Three bags of stuff for killing garden bugs!

Am I a loving, true, contented spouse?
Is this the truth for which you pine and yearn?
Say, here's your order for tomorrow, kid—
A sundial, two stone bird baths and an urn!

I love you, darling, and you have the proof;
You've not been relegated to the shelf,
But lissen . . . if your rock garden requires
More rocks you go and gather 'em yourself!

PRAISE ENOUGH.

Successful was he,
Whose journey is o'er,
Whose epitaph reads:
"He was never a bore!"

Drug Clerk Convicted of Illegal Liquor Sale

Danville, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Seldon Lewis, drug store clerk, was fined $50 and sent to jail for 90 days in police court today for selling legal liquor without a prescription under the old Layman act. He denied the charge and noted an appeal.

Several weeks ago Haskins McFall, owner of the drug store, was convicted, fined and ordered to be jailed, but he obtained a rehearing and witnesses identified Lewis as the man who sold the liquor. McFall was absolved.

2,400 in Page County Listed as Getting Aid

Luray, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Miss Dorothy Smith, FERA director of Page County, announces that 2,400 people are receiving aid in this county.

This number includes about 200 in the county who are on the pauper list. Appropriations for the latter are governed by the Page County Board of Supervisors. The 2,400 who are receiving aid represent about 480 families.

B. & O. Files for New Trial in Job Damages

Hagerstown, Md., April 27 (Spl.). Counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio Railway Co., defendants in a $50,000 suit tried here, in which William H. King, Keedysville, former employe, was awarded $10,454, have filed a motion for a new trial.

King contended he was promised a lifetime job by an official of the company after he had lost an arm in a railroad accident in 1909, but was discharged in 1931.

McDonald Attending Eastern Apple Carnival

Charles Town, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—John Y. McDonald, president of the West Virginia Horticultural Society, attended the Eastern Apple Council meeting yesterday in Washington.

The council is composed of orchardists' representatives from all apple growing areas east of the Mississippi River.

Field House Work Pushed.

Grafton, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Work will be resumed May 1 on the new Grafton high school field house and gymnasium, under the FERA. The work was started under the CWA and stopped when that agency ceased functioning.

GARLAND SEVIER FERGUSON, JR., chairman of Federal Trade Commission. Born 55 years ago at Waynesville, N. C. Graduated high school, Waynesville; midshipman, U. S. Naval Academy, 1895-1896. Student, University of North Carolina, 1897-1900. Admitted to Waynesville Bar, 1900. Attorney for Southern Railroad, Greensboro, 1903-1918. Assistant general counsel Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Washington, D. C., 1918-1921. Again practiced at Greensboro, 1921-1927. Appointed member of Federal Trade Commission by Coolidge for term 1927-1934. Elected chairman, 1933. Retiring. Popular among colleagues. Tall, raw-boned. Pleasant manner. Would drop anything to go fishing, in which pastime he is fairly successful.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Another Letter From a Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My Dear Louise: Your friend Elsie needs a bug in her ear.

When she gave that Norris youngster a date and her parents went up in the air, she made an excuse that honored her innocence more than her judgment.

"Giving him dates doesn't mean anything," said she. "I'm not marrying him."

That sounds all right, but love isn't made to order. It slips up on you. Young people much together may fall in love despite their first indifference or dislike.

You may think yourself too smart to do anything like that, but millions have done it and you are as human as they.

The giving of dates is playing with fire, whether you realize it or not, and the only safe rule is never to go with a youngster the second time if he is the kind you would be ashamed or afraid to marry.

I am not a puritanical crank, and I concede that grownups who pay their own expenses have the inalienable right to make fools of themselves in their own way, so long as they injure nobody else; but young men acquainted with vice are dangerous playmates and I urge you to keep away from them.

Some of them may clean up and stay clean as they grow into manhood, but an equal number will continue as they began.

And many of them, outwardly respectable, will be diseased or enslaved by habit before they are wise enough to "settle down."

If all youngsters were tarred with the same stick, advice to let them alone would be wasted effort; but there are many, schooled in honor and decency since childhood, that are just as clean and blameless as the best of your girl friends.

So long as you have a choice, it seems stupid to take less than the best. Why choose a wormy apple if there are sound ones in the box?

And don't get the idea that "decent" means "sissy." I have known men in many environments, and I give you my word that the he-est are the cleanest. Love, DAD.

Clubs to Hold 3-Day Meeting

Music Groups Convene at Morgantown Thursday.

Morgantown, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—The annual convention of the West Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs will be held here Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The program has been arranged by the Federated Music Clubs of Morgantown, hosts to the convention.

Mrs. Eleanor Brock Hardman, president of the Morgantown Women's Music Club, will preside at the formal opening, when greetings will be extended by Mayor Paul Summers and local club presidents, and the response will be by Mrs. Delbert Robinson, Charleston. Miss Sara B. Huff will lead the singing, and the invocation will be by the Rev. William Gehri, pastor of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Vera Hylton Johnson, Princeton, president, will present her annual message, followed by the report of the program committee, Mrs. Hardman, chairman, and the following State officers: Miss Cora Atkins, first vice president; Mrs. J. G. Cochran, second vice president; Mrs. Frederic W. Smith, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. E. Church, recording secretary; Mrs. Homer Williams, treasurer, and Mrs. G. J. E. Sponseller, auditor.

In the afternoon, district presidents will report as follows: Capitol, Mrs. Helen Townsend Zeibold, Charleston; central, Mrs. Edwin Richardson, Lumberport; Southern, Mrs. L. J. Shepherd, Princeton; Western, Mrs. Roy Lowther, Parkersburg; Eastern, Mrs. Marie McCord Grantham, Martinsburg; Northern, Mrs. C. S. Mosse, Hollidays Cove.

Mixture of Food Held Cause of Child's Death

Danville, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Dr. J. J. Neal, of Danville, today attributed the death last night of Marie Pruitt, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pruitt, of Pelham, to a gastric disturbance set up through the infant eating onions and asparagus and then drinking buttermilk.

She died in convulsions.

Church Group Ends Meeting

Winchester Presbyterial Installs Officers at Keyser.

Keyser, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Winchester Presbyterial adjourned here yesterday to meet next year at Winchester.

The newly elected officers, installed by the Rev. J. C. Frist, Moorefield, were: President, Mrs. Fred E. Warner, Keyser; vice president, Mrs. J. W. Witherspoon, Shepherdstown; recording secretary, Miss Mary Elizabeth Zimmerman, Romney; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ralph Casteel, Keyser; treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Burns, Charles Town; historian, Mrs. Frank Crawford, Winchester; case secretaries—development of spiritual life, Mrs. S. R. Diehl, Martinsburg; literature, Mrs. L. C. Kackley; foreign missions, Mrs. F. P. Edgell, Charles Town; synodical and presbyterial home missions, Mrs. Vernon Dyer, Petersburg; assembly's home missions, Mrs. J. W. Boyer, Woodstock; Christian education and ministerial relief, Miss Lela Rosenberger, Winchester; religious education, Mrs. J. Ray Botti, Martinsburg; district chairman, (a) Mrs. J. Clark Bright, Keyser; (b) Mrs. Paul Leatherman, Petersburg; (c) Mrs. George Rector, Berkeley Springs; (d) Mrs. Robert Campbell, Winchester.

Delegates to the synodical at Massanetta in July are Mrs. Robert B. Campbell, Clear Brook, and Mrs. J. W. Witherspoon, Shepherdstown; alternates, Miss Lela Rosenberger, Winchester, and Miss Elizabeth Burns, Charles Town.

The meeting was attended by 17 officers, 23 auxiliary presidents, 43 delegates and 171 visitors. Group conferences will be held next fall as follows: District A, Thomas; B, Capon Ridge; C, Elk Branch, and D, Bunker Hill.

Medical Society Meets Today.

Norton, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Because of the standing of the visiting specialists who will take part on the program, nearly every doctor from the Clinch Valley section of southwest Virginia expects to be in Norton tomorrow to attend the spring meeting of the Clinch Valley Medical Society.

William Lyon Phelps

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Ralph Hodgson.

One of the foremost living English-writing poets is Ralph Hodgson, who has done everything possible to avoid attracting attention. I have never seen a picture of him, and it is impossible to obtain much information about his life. He is a recluse by nature and has successfully avoided both biographers and interviewers. He is an authority on dogs; his favorite companion is a bull terrier, and a friend of his says the poet plays billiards with grim earnestness.

He has published very little, but nearly every poem he does publish is so remarkable that one wishes he would publish more. He and his great contemporary, Alfred E. Housman, are alike in printing only a few pages of verse in all their years of productivity, and that little is so good that it will never be forgotten.

Mr. Hodgson published in 1907 a tiny volume called "The Last Blackbird," and in 1917 a tinier one called simply "Poems." Some separate pieces he printed in a few paper booklets, which are already much sought after by collectors.

His poetry is never obscure and never queer in form; he is neither an optimist nor a pessimist; he faces life with steady composure, finding life, just as it is, full of wonder and beauty. So far as he has any philosophy, it may be expressed in his poem called

The Mystery.

He came and took me by the hand
Up to a red rose tree,
He kept His meaning to Himself
But gave a rose to me.

I did not pray Him to lay bare
The Mystery to me,
Enough the rose was Heaven to smell,
And His own face to see.

Like many other poets, he loves animals and hates cruelty.

The Bells of Heaven.

'Twould ring the bells of Heaven
The wildest peal for years,
If Parson lost his senses
And people came to theirs,
And he and they together
Knelt down with angry prayers
For tamed and shabby tigers
And dancing dogs and bears,
And wretched, blind pit ponies,
And little hunted hares.

His longer poems, "The Bull" and "Eve," are full of originality and beauty. I am glad if I can induce American readers to become more familiar with the work of this poet.

Virginia Budget Reported Firm

Collections Indicate That Estimated Revenue Will Be Paid.

Richmond, April 27 (AP).—A preliminary survey of State finances, compiled in the office of A. B. Gathright, comptroller, reveals that Virginia's fiscal situation is "fundamentally sound," the comptroller said.

The survey is based on actual collections of revenue up to April, as compared with the estimate for the fiscal year which ends June 30. The estimate shows $13,325,424.64 for the general fund, of which $10,349,763.54 has already been collected.

The remainder, $2,975,661.10, must be collected during May and June.

Examination of the figures showed that the estimates will hold up in most cases. Concerning excess fees, expected to be paid back into the State's treasury, however, the estimate appears to have been too high. Under that item the State expected to receive $30,000, but for the first nine months received only $2,040.72.

Similarly, fees expected from left-over dry cases were estimated at $6,400 while actually only $3,504 came in.

Railroads exceeded the estimate. From that source the State received $2,504,158, while the anticipated amount was only $2,498,382.17. Telephone and telegraph companies were close to the estimated amounts. Scheduled to pay $236,805.59 into the treasury during the year, they have paid to date $235,666.66.

Sales of State property and commodities as well as profits from registration tests and other small fees exceeded the estimate.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Edward Clipp won a judgment of $26 from Lester E. Staley yesterday in Judge D. H. Rogers' Circuit Court. The suit involved an adjustment of rent differences.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

LEWIS MUMFORD makes me a little ill. Not, let me say quickly, over him at all—I am ill over the realization of how much time, eyesight and thought I have wasted on books which do not stand knee-high to his latest volume. "Technics and Civilization" (Harcourt-Brace, $4.50), a long, wide and deep survey of man and the machine and their effects upon each other, is among the two or three most intelligent modern books which I have ever read. It is as clear and pointed as an A. A. A. road map; it is timely (Heaven save us! it is so timely it hurts); the lessons it teaches are absolutely indispensable to any member of society who will forego the ostrich-act and lift his head out of the sand. I do not hesitate to call the book, simply and sincerely, great.

THEO. HALL.

Opening the book is like going up onto a mountain. The blithe self-apologies of capitalist and Marxist alike fall away, the caterwaulings of one section after another of politicians die down into rather silly murmurings. We are out of the hubbub and we can begin to look around. Supreme and rare gift of knowledge, we are given perspective and proportion on our own lives and environment.

* * * *

Very patiently, with abundant illustration and more than occasional wit, Mr. Mumford narrates the advance of the machine as a development of the order and power-seeking side of human nature. He divides industrial (and social) history into three interpenetrating eras, the earlier still existing in some phases of society.

Eotechnic (dawn-technic) is the first, an age extending roughly from the Tenth to the Eighteenth Century, characterized by man's first wishful seeking of an external order in nature itself. Wood was the typical material; wind and water the typical prime movers. The resulting machines did not cause the marked increase in regularity of life; this was already prepared for in the timing and regimentation of medieval monasteries, armies, and counting-houses.

Pushing up through the eotechnic era was the mounting importance of the mine, which conditioned directly the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Century paleotechnic (old-technic) age. Coal and iron led to the widespread and wasteful worship of sheer quantity, of sheer power. The method of the mine—exploit fully at the cost of all human values in labor and in pollution of environment, exhaust the resources and then move on—was, and still is, the typical method of all paleotechnic industry. Slagheaps, slums, and a slatternly population, wars and depressions, are the sole possible results.

Under this too familiar to be properly disgraceful scene are rising some signs which point to a fresh and vastly more hopeful era—the neotechnic (new-technic). It is shown in the use of electricity and of alloy metals, in the attention to accuracy, economy, purity and cleanliness on every front of industry and life. The laboring man, in such work as neotechnics have taken over, is not a part of the machine but a guiding hand and brain over it, a "machine-herd." Work and power, which we have naively thought to be ends in themselves, will inevitably fall into place as means toward the human and humane life. In short, after seeming to pull away from the organic wholeness of life, the machine can be used to contribute to it. It is a servant, not a tyrant.

* * * *

Doubtless Mr. Mumford could have stopped there and left the book, superficially at least, as description. But all along the way the implications were too plain; in his last chapters he does not hedge at following them out. When he suggests possibilities of change, he really means that these changes are imperative—unless mankind would continue in suicidal chaos or revert to a subagriculture and a subindustry below the level of the Seventeenth Century.

Despite the snatching of the shareholder class, capitalism must and will disappear. In the sense of owning and controlling, it is gone already. Mr. Mumford sees that we will have to come to a "basic communism," a state-guaranteed assurance of normal consumption and of normal work to everybody—in other words, the dividends of natural resources and the machine are for society as a whole. What is really amusing to note is that these tendencies are not to be discovered by pointing childishly at a "brain-trust revolution." To say the least, that is locking the barn-door after the horse has been stolen. The implications of the machine itself and of industrial efficiency rising through 500 years lead squarely to these changes.

It is embarrassing for me to leave so able and acute a book with this skimming. What I have put in a single word, Mr. Mumford dilates upon and proves to the hilt. The only way to object to his thesis is to shut one's eyes and retire into a neurotic wish-fantasy formed from the dead past. The movement toward a planned and man-controlled equilibrium of society exists today all around us, surer than death or taxes.

* * * *

Not one of you can read "Technics and Civilization" without finding the scales peeled from your eyes. And you will have a grand time in the process. The book, important as it is, has not one dull page. Ideas flash and sparkle and strike deep. You will laugh aloud at the refreshing jolt of seeing some true thing for the first time. Even the long bibliography, with its quick and sound comments on the books, is a mental adventure.

Go out and beg, borrow, steal or buy "Technics and Civilization." If I had any sense of proportion, I would shut up shop and not read another book until Mr. Mumford's next.

M. E. Culpeper Session Slated For Thursday

27 Charlottesville District Churches Will Send Delegates.

Culpeper, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—The Rev. M. F. Draper and a committee of laymen are completing plans for the entertainment in the Culpeper Methodist Episcopal Church South, Wednesday and Thursday, of the Charlottesville District Conference of Methodists.

The district comprises 27 charges, each of which will be represented by the pastor, three lay delegates and the lay leader of the charge; also, eleven local preachers, one supernumerary, and seven superannuates.

Dr. Daniel T. Merritt, presiding elder of the Charlottesville District, will be present for the opening session. The program will be appropriate to the sesquicentennial in American Methodism.

Speakers will be the Rev. W. S. Deyerle, of Richmond; the Rev. W. A. Orser, Charlottesville; the Rev. Frank L. Wells, D. D., Norfolk, a former pastor of the Culpeper Church; the Rev. J. W. Smith, of Centenary Church, Richmond; the Rev. J. Manning Potts, who will discuss "Missions;" Dr. W. A. Wright, "Christian Education;" Dr. M. D. Pence, "Lay Activities," and Mrs. T. G. Pullen, "Woman's Missionary Work."

It is expected that dedication services will be held preceding the conference for the stained glass memorial window which has been installed to the memory of Cornelia and Jeremiah Norris.

New Clerk Appointed By Hampshire Court

Romney, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.). Edgar G. Shanholtzer has been named clerk of the Circuit Court of Hampshire County, by Judge H. G. Kump to succeed John M. Snarr, who resigned to accept the postmastership here.

City Christian Church Picks Rev. J. R. Mills.

Dr. Raphael H. Miller and the official board of the National City Christian Church announce the appointment of the Rev. J. Raymond Mills as minister of religious education and young people's work.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills are in Washington now and will assume their new work at once. Mr. Mills, who was selected from a large field of well-qualified candidates, is a graduate of Pomona College, Claremont, Calif. He has his master's degree from the Hartford School of Religious Education and has completed his work for bachelor of divinity degree at the China department of the Kennedy School of Missions, Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Mills, following his work at Pomona College, served for three years as teacher in the International College, Smyrna, Turkey. During his post-graduate work in Hartford, Mr. Mills served two years as director of religious education in Middletown, Conn., and later as director of young people's work in the First Church of Christ, Hartford. Mrs. Mills is also a trained religious worker and served as teacher under the American board in Greece and later at International College in Turkey. She has also finished her work in the China department of the Kennedy School of Missions.

"Making the Church Safe for Christianity" is the sermon topic of Dr. Miller for Sunday morning. In the evening he will preach on "Things That Can Not Be Shaken."

Tale of Two Editors

Ellis Contrasts Despair of Man Who Seeks to Insure Bodily Comforts of Family to Faith of Man Who Created Sunday Schools.

By William T. Ellis.

Recently, I met one of the world's most famous journalists. I had looked forward to the interview with eagerness, for I wanted to learn his views upon the present crisis in human society.

But I found him obsessed by one major idea—how to provide security for his children in the uncertain future. He is wealthy, and has set up trust funds for them, and made investments and secured home sites in various parts of the world. Because he is scared about what is ahead of the race, he has devoted the best of his knowledge and wisdom to setting up safety for his family.

Of course, if what he fears should come to pass, none of his precautions will amount to anything. It seems not to have occurred to this brainy man that the one way to fulfill his hopes for his children is to train them to be self-reliant, free and helpful members of society. I could not discover that he had ever thought of preparing them for one of the ministering professions, such as medicine and nursing, which carry on, regardless of political and social changes. My distinguished friend is just one more of the ambitious, fond and futile parents, like the wife of Zebedee, who carried her vaulting plans for her sons to the ears of Jesus. She wanted the best places in the expected kingdom for her boys. Out of that incident grows this lesson upon which the thoughts of millions will be centered.

Mistakes of Parents.

It did not occur to me to suggest this passage from Matthew's Gospel to the famous editor. Yet it is uncannily pertinent to the times. In it we find the foolish plans and pride of parents; the uncertainty of official place, and the profound principle of preeminence.

We must deal charitably with the action of the mother of Zebedee's sons. She was expressing the deepest desire for motherhood, that the best the future holds might come to her children.

Strange, isn't it, that so much parental love should be so unwise? Zebedee's wife was almost typical in her lack of discernment. The other day I heard one of those little stories of real life that are forever popping up before our eyes. A New England business man has one son, whom he keeps in a subordinate place in his organization. He will not give him responsibility or authority, nor yet an adequate salary, for the son is a man in his thirties. "Everything I have will go to Charley, I am building up the business just for him"—and leaving Charley without any fitness to carry on! What a common tale! If only he would help the son to be efficient, he would be really assuring his future.

Another Old Custom.

Salome, wife of Zebedee, was following one of the world's oldest fashions when she gave rein to her ambition for high position for her sons. Mothers in Washington and Ottawa and London and Paris and Nanking and Moscow are today shrewdly playing the same game. It is the way of the earth to seek selfishly.

But it is not the spirit of true success, nor the spirit of Jesus. Well might Jesus reply to the Zebedee family, "Ye know not what ye ask." Selfishness is always short-sighted. In the scramble for the prizes of life it often misses the real rewards. If you would get a glimpse of the unsatisfactoriness of what the world commonly calls "success," look at the tired, dissatisfied faces of the rich old men who are whiling away the tedium of their closing years in the exclusive clubs.

"There is a way that seemeth right unto man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."

Tactless Salome precipitated a crisis in the group of Jesus' intimates. And her foolish ambition caused Jesus to lay down, with considered seriousness, the entire case of the philosophy of paganism versus the philosophy of the kingdom of God.

Christ's Rule of Succession.

Here we have, in a few pellucid passages, the whole revolutionary conception of life as taught by the Master. What He said to the disciples applies forever to all who would walk His way. Let me quote the words of Christ, which are the heart of this lesson:

"Jesus called them unto Him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you; but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many."

The Most Potent Editor.

I close this study with the citation of another editor, a greater—indeed, the most potent newspaper editor that ever lived—Robert Raikes, of Gloucester, England, who, a century and a half ago, began a ministry to outcast and needy children which developed into the modern Sunday School. His work still continues in growing power. Alongside of his power, that wielded by the pens of Greeley, Dana, Bennett, Walter and Northcliffe was transitory and trifling. By the Jesus route of self-forgetting service this English editor became one of the great constructive figures of time. He is the leader of a mighty army of Sunday School teachers and workers whose motto is "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

The Children Take Bad "Medney"

The next morning when Hee-Haw woke, just as usual he had to wake everybody else with that awful bray of his. None of Blackie's family had ever heard a donkey sing, and it scared them nearly out of their wits, as well as their beds. They all, at one time, asked Blackie what on earth that noise was. Blackie told them that it was nothing but old Hee-Haw ringing the rising bell, but, since they had a plenty to eat, and wouldn't have to hunt any that day, let's take another nap.

But you know how children are: when they wake they want to get up, and bear children are pretty much like all other children about some things. So Benny and Jenny slipped out of bed and tipioed out of the house. They had been so busy telling Blackie and his friends howdy last night that it got dark before they had time to see what all

Blackie had in his wagon, and they wanted to know. Any sort of child has curiosity enough, goodness knows, but a bear baby has more than any child in all the world. If he could get to the moon he would tear it all to pieces trying to find out what makes it shine.

Plenty of Curiosity.

Blackie had plenty of curiosity himself, but he had never had the time nor place to open all the packages in Mr. Man's wagon. He had intended looking through them that very morning after breakfast, but the children beat him to it. They began to look through all the things in the wagon, and Benny took out a box of garden seeds and onions and other things. And then: Oh, what was that? Truly a bag of tobacco and half dozen pipes just like those he had seen Blackie and the others smoking last night after supper. It had looked mighty good to Benny, last night, and he had wished he could smoke a pipe.

Billie Possum had looked especially happy, grinning all the time he was smoking, just like he was having a mighty good time. "Look," said Benny, "now we can have a smoke before Daddy gets up." There were matches in the box with the pipes and tobacco, and in a few minutes Benny had filled and lighted a pipe for both Jenny and himself. Then they jumped out of the wagon and ran down to the spring, and hid behind the washhouse so nobody could see them smoking.

Now, smoking isn't very good for grown folks, and it is awfully bad for children, and always makes them terribly sick, but these cubbies didn't know it. So they had lots of fun for a few minutes, blowing smoke high up into the air, just like they had seen Blackie do last night. And then directly Jenny said: "Benny, I don't think this is very good tobacco; it's making me fell weak down in the tummy."

She put the pipe down and began to rub her eyes and to cry right easy. Then she lay down on the ground and stayed there just as still as if she had been dead. She was so sick that she didn't even hear Benny say, "My tobacco is spoiled, too," and she didn't know when he came and lay down beside her.

Calls Hound Dog.

After a while Bettie got up and went out into the kitchen to cook breakfast. She missed the cubs from their bed, and she told Blackie that they were awfully full of mischief, and he had better look them up. When he got to the wagon he soon saw that they had been there. He called, but he didn't get any answer.

Then he called Hound Dog, and told him to look for them, and then Blackie went out to give Hee-Haw his breakfast. When he came back he met Hound Dog with two pipes in his mouth, and a broad grin. "I guess these pipes will tell you what those cubbies have been doing," said Hound Dog. "They are pretty dead asleep, down by the spring." Then Blackie went to the house and told Dr. Coon that when those children woke up he wanted him to give them some of the worst medicine he had, and to tell them they would have to take it every time they smoked a pipe.

They slept a long time, and when they woke up there sat Dr. Coon with his medicine chest. He fixed both of them a dose of gall-berry juice, which is the bitterest medicine in the world, and told them that they would have to take it every time they smoked a pipe. "That means I will take just one dose in my life," said Benny, as he swallowed hard to get it down. "Say that for me, too," whimpered Jenny, "for I reckon that smoke will last me if I live a thousand years."

Dillinger—Public Enemy Number One
HOW did Dillinger get that way? What sort of childhood, what social and educational background goes into the making of a dangerous criminal? Felix Bruner, in the Special Articles Section, tells the moving story—a story which has surprises in it for many fathers and mothers who think their sons are in no danger of taking the wrong road.

Fetes Slated In Farewell For Envoys

De Cardenas, De Limas and Nanos Receive Many Favors.

Parties for Three Fill Social Calendar to End of May.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

With three of the most popular couples in the Diplomatic Corps leaving Washington within the next few weeks, the social calendar of the Capital to the end of May is filled almost every night with engagements for dinners planned for either the retiring Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, the retiring Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas, or the retiring Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Nano.

Frequently parties are being given for two of these young couples or even all three on the same evening.

Meanwhile, preparations for travel are under way, for the boxes of the De Limas must go to Brussels, those of the De Cardenases to Paris, and those of the Nanos to Bucharest.

Visit in Canada.

The Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas left Washington yesterday with the Minister of Canada and Mrs. William Duncan Harridge to spend the week-end at the Herridges' home near Ottawa. And an interesting week-end it will be, as the Minister and Mrs. Herridge will entertain for their guests this evening at dinner, and Sunday has been planned as a full day for the visitors in the Canadian captal. The Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas will return to Washington on Monday, and from then until they sail, on May 26, will be entertained every day.

Although the Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas will sail on the same day, they will embark on different ships, the former leaving on the Italian line to stop in Madrid for a brief stay at the foreign office, and Senora de Cardenas leaving on a French ship to go immediately to France, where she will be joined in Paris by her husband.

Ambassador and Mme. de Lima e Silva will go to New York May 16, and will sail aboard the Statendam May 18, for Belgium.

Parties for de Limas.

A glimpse at their calendar for a few days before their departure will show how popular this couple has become in the three years they have been in Washington. Last evening they were the dinner guests of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and this evening the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold H. Sims will entertain in their honor. Tomorrow evening, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison will entertain in their honor and on Monday evening the de Limas will be the dinner guests of Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman will entertain at dinner for them on Tuesday evening, and Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts will be hosts to them Wednesday at the Roberts home in Georgetown. The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito will have the de Limas as their dinner guests on Thursday evening, and so on through the next two weeks.

The Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil will entertain at dinner May 7, in honor of the de Limas and the de Cardenas.

Mr. and Mme. Nano will entertain at a mint julep party tomorrow at the 1925 F street club. They have invited a few of their very close friends to remain for supper. They will leave Washington May 5 to sail for Rumania.

Chilean Diplomat Visits Santiago

Senor Cohen Plans Return to Washington.

Word has been received in Washington from Senor Benjamin Cohen, formerly Charge d'Affaires of Chile in Washington, describing his trip since he left the Capital last November to attend the Pan-American Conference in Montevideo as a delegate of his country.

On leaving Montevideo, Mr. Cohen went to Ascuncion, Paraguay, where he served as Charge d'Affaires of Chile.

On April 5 he departed from Asuncion for Santiago, Chile, to spend several weeks with his family before sailing for New York. From New York he will come directly to Washington, probably to assume the duties of Charge d'Affaires of Chile again, as the present Charge d'Affaires, Senor Don Edwards Bello, must return to his own post in Havana, where he is minister.

Mr. Cohen will be welcomed back to Washington by many friends. He has spent the past 13 years in the Capital, except for several intermissions of duty elsewhere.

Margaret Baker To Wed May 26

Miss Margaret Baker, daughter of the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Newton D. Baker, has selected Saturday, May 26, as the date of her wedding to Mr. Fulton Wright, of St. Louis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Moorhead Wright, of Little Rock, Ark. The wedding will take place in St. Christopher's Episcopal Church at Gates Mills, near Cleveland.

Mrs. John Phillips McGean will be her sister's matron of honor and only attendant, and Mr. Moorhead Wright, jr., will serve as best man for his brother.

Following the ceremony, there will be a breakfast for the two families at the Baker home in Shaker Heights, Cleveland.

Capital Visitor From Boston

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

MISS BETSY BERRIEN, daughter of Capt. Frank D. Berrien, U. S. N., and Mrs. Berrien, is at the Mayflower Hotel with her mother for a short visit. Miss Berrien made her debut in Washington when her father was stationed at the Navy Yard. They are now making their home in Boston, where Capt. Berrien is now on duty.

Things Old and Strange Await Visitors at May Day Carnival

Invitations are being issued by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington for its May Day Carnival Tuesday afternoon and evening in the National Press Club auditorium.

The invitation is made in a style characteristic of the newspaper profession, being printed in "proof" form on regular galley proof paper, and displays a variety of types, slugs and "ears" which are a part of the makeup of a daily newspaper.

The invitations announced the purpose of the carnival—to raise funds for the milk fund for undernourished children and the fellowship fund of the club. The attractions are proclaimed on the invitations: "See the 'Dolls of All Nations,' the book, music, art, flower, 'whatnot,' fortune telling, grab bag, bingo booth. Witness the official and newspaper women's spelling bee."

Portrait of a Man.

One of the most interesting donations to the booths at the carnival is a portrait said to have been painted in 1650. The painting is done on a 12-inch tin disk, now growing ragged around the edges, and it shows the signature of C. Ortega. The likeness has not been identified, yet it bears a strong resemblance to Sir Walter Raleigh.

The disk is one piece of an interesting assortment of oddities presented to the fair by Capt. Wijnant Johnston, author of "Eyelids of the Morn."

A beautiful silver swan paperweight in this collection has been in his family for three generations. Its origin is unknown.

There is also a rare paper cutter in the form of a miniature reproduction of the sword of Gen. von Hindenburg, purchased in Germany while the donor was a member of the Army of Occupation; and an ornamental Sphynx, the age of which is unknown, taken from a tomb in Egypt and given to an earlier Johnston by an Egyptian.

Jig Saws and an Urn.

A handsomely carved urn made from a stone taken from the Dead Sea and presented to Capt. Johnston's great-grandfather in 1840 by an Arabian sheik during a celebration in the Holy Land, and a French inkwell incased in painted wood, also are included in the lot.

Another collection of useful as well as ornamental articles, donated by Mrs. George F. Bowerman, includes imported china, brass and silver novelties, jeweled necklaces and household utilities.

Attractive Young Student

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS LOUISE HERRON,

daughter of Mrs. C. D. Herron, one of the attractive members of Washington's younger set, who is a student at Holton Arms School.

Fine Rumanian Homes Inspire Art of Living

Luxury and Leisure Rule Domestic Occupation of Women.

The colorful homes of Rumania reflect the warmth and vibrance of the Latin temperament. They are expressive of a love of beauty and luxury and are created for leisure rather than for work.

While a Rumanian woman's primary interest is in her home, she centers her attention upon the drawing room rather than on the domestic routine. Her home is decorated with exquisite hand work and embroideries, made during her leisure hours.

Rugs are an important part of a Rumanian home, perhaps because of the country's proximity to the Near East. From the time a small girl can learn to weave and design, one of her absorbing interests is rug making. In a patrician, land-owning family the wool for rugs is taken from sheep raised on the estate and carded and prepared by the peasants. The colors and patterns are selected by the daughter of the house, and while she does some of the actual weaving, much is done by the peasant women.

Kitchen Tasks Delegated.

Rugs are used as covers for divans, wall hangings and table scarfs as well as on the floor. They give a rich, almost Oriental appearance to the room.

The kitchen is superintended entirely by servants. The mistress of the house rarely enters it. She devotes most of her time to painting, embroidery, music and making her home beautiful. The more practical aspect of housekeeping as known in the northern countries is left to others.

The daily schedule in Rumania is adjusted to a leisurely way of living. Noonday lunch at 2 or 3 o'clock is followed by rest and relaxation. The men always return to their homes at lunch time instead of eating at clubs or restaurants as is more customary in England and America.

Sharp Class Distinction.

Dinner, the social highlight of the day, is attended with much ceremony. It is a rather long and formal meal served about 9 o'clock. The Rumanian women dress charmingly and lend their wit and conversation toward making the meal as pleasant as possible. After dinner there is usually informal entertainment of some sort. Gaiety is the keynote of the evening.

There is sharp class distinction in Rumania. Women are either of the wealthy, patrician class, or of the serf or peasant type. The middle classes are not prominent. This of course, has a decided reaction upon the trend of housekeeping and homemaking. Homes are either luxurious and beautifully decorated or they are extremely simple, with only the bare necessities for living.

Mrs. Stamford White and child and Mrs. Carl R. Loop, all of Greenwich, Conn., are at the Carlton.

Mrs. C. August Simpson will entertain at a tea this afternoon in her home on Massachusetts avenue for the Washington Alumnae of Hollins College, and in honor of Miss Bessie Carter Randolph, president of the college.

Tomorrow evening Miss Frances Darlington Simpson will entertain about 30 guests at a buffet supper.

Tea to Honor Mme. Michelet Slated Tuesday

Miss Grace E. Frysinger Hostess to Visitor From Norway.

Miss Grace E. Frysinger will entertain at a tea Tuesday afternoon at 2400 Sixteenth street for Mme. Marie Michelet, of Norway, and Mrs. Robert T. Moseley, of England.

Mme. Michelet, who is in this country on a lecture tour, will arrive in Washington Monday with her husband, Prof. Michelet, to remain until Thursday. For 18 years she has been a member of the education committee of the International Council of Women and a delegate to many congresses of that organization, including the one in Washington in 1925. For many years Mme. Michelet has lectured on matters connected with the home, youth and children, her lecture tours taking her into many countries. She has studied these matters in Germany, England and the Scandinavian countries.

Mme. Michelet is president of the National Home and Housewives Organization of Norway; president of the International Federation "The North League of Housewives," of Norway, Sweden, Finland and Denmark, and first vice president of the newly formed International Organization of Rural Women's Organizations in 35 countries.

On Thursday evening Miss Frysinger will entertain at a small dinner in honor of Prof. and Mme. Michelet. Mme. Michelet will speak at the international dinner to be given by the Women's National Farm and Garden Association on Wednesday.

Culbertson on Bridge

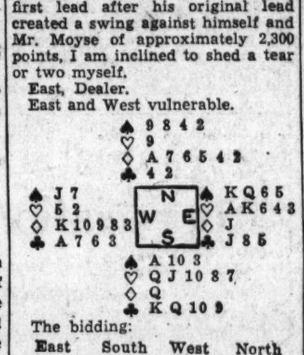
A Major Catastrophe.

Mr. A. Moyse, jr., of New York, reports today's hand as the most agonizing experience which ever befell him at the Bridge table. He mournfully points out that it is bad enough to be slowly and inexorably squeezed to a pulp by a Declarer's brilliant line of play, but when the squeeze is developed only through a fantastic series of misplays by one's own partner the situation becomes insupportable. After examining the hand in question and noting that North's first discard and first lead after his original lead created a swing against himself and Mr. Moyse of approximately 2,300 points, I am inclined to shed a tear or two myself.

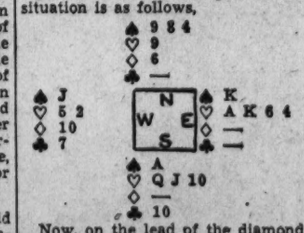
East, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♡	2♣	2◇	Pass
2♠	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Of course, the less said about the East-West bidding the better. West's two notrump bid was simply atrocious and had he gone down 1,400 points in the final three-notrump contract, an inevitable result with reasonably good defense, the responsibility would have been largely his. He could hardly have known that five tricks would be tossed him in the play of the hand. This is how it happened. North duly opened the club 4 to his partner's bid. West did not play the Ace until the third round and on this trick North made his first brilliant effort, discarding the diamond 7. Declarer now led the spade 7 to Dummy's Queen, which Mr. Moyse allowed to hold, it being perfectly obvious that the only possible reentry to the closed hand must be in spades. The diamond Knave was led from Dummy, covered respectively with the Queen and King and taken by North's Ace. Now came the play which caused weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. North at this point held eight cards, seven of which he could have led with reasonable safety. It is true that the lead of any diamond would have saved the Declarer several tricks, but the contract would still have been defeated had not North selected with unerring accuracy the one card calculated to reap absolute havoc for his own side—namely, the diamond deuce! It will readily be seen that when Declarer, hardly believing the evidence of his own eyesight, scooped this up with the three and proceeded to run three more diamonds, South felt as though he were lying under a steam roller. On the lead of the deuce of diamonds he discarded a heart, on the next diamond a spade, on the next to last another heart, but when the last diamond was led by the fiendish West he gave up the ghost and figuratively threw his hand out of the window. It will be observed that from the return lead of the diamond, South is powerless to escape a progressive squeeze. When eight cards have been played the situation is as follows,



Now, on the lead of the diamond 10, upon which East discards the spade King, South is faced with an impossible discard. He can not discard the spade Ace because then Declarer will follow with the spade Knave and he will be forced to unguard another suit. The last four tricks are therefore indubitably the Declarer's, making ten in all, or contract plus an overtrick. A sad, sad affair.

Women Will Never Be Limited To the Home, Says Educator

President of Sweet Briar College Thinks They Belong in Any Place Where They Are Able to Prove Their Abilities.

IT IS INCONCEIVABLE the time will ever come when woman's sphere will be limited entirely to the home, thinks Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College, who is in Washington attending the executive board meeting of the American Association of University Women. Dr. Glass has just returned from abroad, where she attended the International Federation of University Women.

"I believe women belong in any place where they are able to prove their entire attention to the home "To say all women should devote their entire attention to the home makes just as little sense as to say all coleric men should work in a powder factory. Of course, when women are forced to choose between homes and careers, they have to be willing to sacrifice in favor of the home, but it is foolish to say that a woman who doesn't have those exigencies must give up the post in which she has proved her efficiency and devote her entire time to domestic duties."

Dr. Glass further pointed out we are gradually progressing toward the goal when the conflict as to whether the man or woman earns the mony will subside.

"But although this is the goal," she asserted, "it has not been reached yet. There are still many men who are mortified when other men find out their wives are contributing to the support of the family. As long as women have to combat that prejudice, they will always be undecided as to whether they should go out into the world, prove their efficiency and fill important posts in the industrial or professional world."

Dr. Glass emphasized this situation is in no sense a hangover from the Victorian age.

"It is rather," she explained, "a remnant of the age of Adam and Eve. I have no patience with the custom of charging Victoria with everything old fashioned. We lay on Victoria and her age things of which she never dreamed. In fact she was a rather advanced individual."

Although she hesitated to say whether she believed women were accorded more privileges in the professional world now than a decade ago, she expressed the opinion that in the academic field women were undoubtedly gaining more recognition.

Dr. Glass believes, however, women are as successful in other pursuits as they are in teaching.

"I believe," she said, "teaching is no more a woman's forte than other lines of work. Of course, woman's special sensitivity gives her particular efficiency in such fields as, for instance, nursing."

As a Y. W. C. A. secretary during the World War, Dr. Glass had an unusual opportunity to observe nurses at work, as she spent nine months working with them in France.

"Aside from the patience, sympathy and gentleness of touch—which most people associate with competent nursing—I have seen proof that nursing demands courage and endurance equal to that of a soldier," she said.

In discussing woman's position in politics she was not enthusiastic.

"While some women have done excellently," she averred, "in general, I believe women are not yet full-grown in politics."

Kappa Beta Pi, Legal Sorority, Opens Meeting

Nursing Group Will Hold 3-Day Convention Beginning Today.

KAPPA BETA PI, the oldest professional sorority in the world, of which Judge Florence Allen is a member, will begin its Mideastern Province convention here today.

Delegates, including many women of National prominence, will come from the Washington College of Law, George Washington University, National University, West Virginia University, and the University of Kentucky. They will be welcomed on behalf of the District of Columbia by Commissioner Melvin Hazen.

Judge Allen, first woman judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, will be the guest of honor at a testimonial luncheon meeting given by her fellow members of the sorority today at the Mayflower. Attorney General of the United States Homer S. Cummings will be one of the speakers at the luncheon.

• • • •

The Woman's National Democratic Club will give a tea in honor of Judge Allen this afternoon at 1526 New Hampshire avenue.

Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, president, will be assisted by Mrs. Louis Brandeis, Mrs. Joseph Cox, Mrs. Finis Garrett, Judge Fay Bentley, Mrs. George N. Peek, Mrs. Harry N. Rickey, Mrs. Edward Keating, Mrs. George M. Eckels, Mrs. Rose Yates Forrester, Miss Eleanor Connolly, Miss Elizabeth Howry and Mrs. James T. Newton.

Mrs. William D. Cheatham and Miss Elizabeth Wheeler will make the introductions.

Nurses to Hold Meet.

SEVENTH-DAY Adventist nurses will hold a three-day convention beginning today at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park. The convention is under the direction of the medical department of the General Conference, of which Dr. A. W. Truman, medical director of the Washington Sanitarium, is the secretary. Nursing leaders from all parts of the country have been gathering here for the past few days and have registered at the local institution.

The Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women will hold a bridge-luncheon meeting at 1:15 o'clock today at the clubhouse. Mrs. Henry G. Knght will act as hostess.

Mrs. Bernice Bartl will give a number of readings before the Washington Chapter of the Mary Baldwn Alumnae Association at 3 o'clock today at 1680 Thirty-first street northwest. Miss Ella Moore will be the hostess.

Miss Alice Hutchins Drake will give an illustrated lecture at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel before the Sons and Daughters of the U. S. A. The subject of her lecture will be "Know Your Own Washington."

Unity Chapter, No. 22, of the Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its annual ball and card party at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Almas Temple, 1315 K street northwest.

The Kenmore Association of Fredericksburg, Va., will give a tea this afternoon in honor of Garden Week. The hostesses will be Miss Nannie Barnie, Mrs. Cortlandt Rosebro and Mrs. Homer Hinkle.

Dr. Louis V. Rapeer, president of Research University, will discuss "Psychology and the Day's Work" at 8:15 o'clock tonight at the League for Larger Life, 1414 Sixteenth street northwest.

When and If the Men Leave Something Unsaid, Perhaps Senator Caraway Will Make a Speech

Says There's Opportunity Enough in Committee Meetings.

The "First Ladies of the Capital" radio interview series conducted by The Washington Post, provides the opportunity for citizens all over the country to hear first hand from leading feminine personalities in National government, what they stand for in the contribution they are making to the Nation's service.

Twice weekly, The Post's radio reporter interrogates her distinguished feminine guests, providing a clearing house for information concerning the part women play in government here in the Nation's Capital. The seventh article in the series appears below.

By Margaret Santry
(The Radio Reporter).

SENATOR HATTIE CARAWAY, of Arkansas, believes in letting the men do the talking. So far the men in the Senate have left nothing unsaid on any subject. When they do, perhaps she will make a speech.

Thus the first woman ever elected to the United States Senate confided the reason for the dearth of Caraway speeches to the Nation-wide audience of radio listeners who heard her yesterday. She was interviewed in the Washington Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" series at 3 o'clock over WMAL, in a National Broadcasting Company network.

Although the lady Senator discoursed on matters of state, she did assure her feminine hearers she has not lost touch with the domestic realm.

Her home, garden and three grown sons make her a full life away from the concerns of public office.

There Was Comment.

Senator Caraway: "There was much comment on one occasion when we had a Senate recess—because it was discovered I spent my recess hanging curtains and darning socks. Why that was any more unusual for a woman Senator than for a man from the Senate to go home and work in the garden I can't imagine."

The quiet, unassuming little feminine legislator who acquitted herself so well in taking over the responsibilities of her late husband's office that her native State elected her to return to the Senate—confessed to the strangeness of it all in the beginning. With no previous experience there was much timidity to overcome upon becoming the first woman to invade the Senate chamber.

Senator Caraway: "While I helped out in headquarters in my husband's campaigns, and through him had a knowledge of Government affairs, I soon found it was entirely different from talking things over with him—this having to assume the full responsibilities of the position."

When pressed for details about her first day in a Senate session, Senator Caraway confided:

Senator Caraway: "I was terribly scared. When I sat down the chair was too high and my feet wouldn't touch the floor. I guess I gave Senator Robinson next to me a look of distress, because he leaned over and said, 'That chair is a little too high for you.' And I replied, 'I am afraid it is—in more ways than one.' He was very sympathetic and his words were very encouraging that first day."

Upon completing the late Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway's term of office, her first experience as a political campaigner was even more frightening—even though eventually she beat six men candidates and got more votes than all of them put together.

Senator Caraway—Indeed, my campaign was an exciting experience. I made the first speech of my life at its opening. I'll never forget that immense crowd. I hadn't written one word, and friends who were near me when I was speaking said that my knees were shaking so they were afraid they wouldn't support me. They were hoping I'd move my arms or something to relieve the nervous tension. I talked 15 minutes, and how I managed I don't know. Since then people have told me it was the worst speech they had ever heard.

IN PUBLIC LIFE a very competent, if very unassuming legislator, Senator Hattie Caraway, above, devotes her private life to her home, her garden, and three grown sons. And thinks it only natural she should hang curtains, darn sox, in spare time.

Was Terribly Scared Her First Senate Session, She Admits.

"Fortunately, they became better after that first one. I made 39 speeches in seven days and toward the end I was never able to stop under half an hour."

Miss Santry—You introduced the poem, "A Farm Woman to Earth" into the Senatorial record once. Do I understand you are particularly interested in legislation that helps the women of the agricultural regions?

Senator Caraway—In a measure, yes. I was reared on a farm and I have a sympathy and understanding of the problems of farm women. However, I have not confined my interest to them because I believe that which helps the whole is the major consideration. I am interested in the agricultural welfare of the country and in keeping it safeguarded because it is the backbone of the country. When farmers aren't prosperous, the country itself can not be.

"Then, besides my stand for economy in government, I am for legislation that works toward the relief of people who need relief. I am for the man who has lost his job and is losing his home; for the farmer who can not get the cost of production for his product. That is the kind of legislation I have been voting for in the Senate, and shall continue to fight until it is accomplished."

Miss Santry: "I am sure that stand has the applause of all those who look to Congress for leadership in public office and good government. Do you feel, Senator Caraway, there should be more women in the Senate?"

Why Not Women?

Senator Caraway: "Why not? It is in no way a reflection on the other Senators to have women share in their deliberations. They are all working toward one common aim—the upbuilding and protecting of our Government and our people. We differ in our views sometimes, but I have the greatest respect for the caliber of the men with whom I serve."

The people of Arkansas who heard their popular woman Senator yesterday must have swelled with State pride as Mrs. Caraway described the glories of "the wonder State." "We people of Arkansas boast we could build a fence around our State and still have all the resources within necessary to carry on," she said.

But as for speechmaking, Senator Caraway feels as yet there has been no particular reason for her to make a speech. She's had all the opportunity she wants to express her opinions in committees, where the real whipping into shape of legislation takes place. She serves on three committees, Agriculture, Commerce and Library, besides being chairman of the Enrolled Bills Committee. These provide her with ample training for that future time when and if she feels called upon to get up and contribute her bit to Senante oratory.

Hear Representative Florence Kahn, of California, next Monday over WRC in an interview with The Post's radio reporter at 12 noon over a National Broadcasting Co. network.

Lawyer Scouts Discrimination Against Women

Says Those Who Don't Expect Favors Regarded As Equals.

WOMEN who enter the court-room as lawyers—not as women—and who expect no favors because of their sex are never victims of discrimination, in the belief of Mrs. Jean Nelson Penfield, prominent attorney of New York, who has won international reputation in her profession.

Mrs. Penfield has been in Washington for the past week to act as parliamentarian for the biennial convention of the League of American Pen Women.

"I realize there is much discussion of discrimination against women lawyers," said Mrs. Penfield yesterday at the Willard, "but I firmly believe the few cases in which there may have been slight discrimination have been exaggerated. Of course, there are some organizations, such as the Bar Association of the City of New York, to which women are not admitted, but it is comparatively unimportant to most women attorneys that they are excluded."

Men Resent Losing.

Mrs. Penfield admitted, however, in her wide acquaintanceship with men attorneys, she had met few who did not resent losing a case to a woman.

"I don't suppose men will ever get over disliking to lose out to a woman in any field," she asserted. "They don't mind if another man wins an occasional case, but a woman—well that is an entirely different matter."

Mrs. Penfield expressed the belief law is at present extending a beckoning finger to women.

"We need more women attorneys," she stated. "So many women, educated in law are afraid to open an office, to attempt to build up a law practice just as men do. They should not be afraid because they are peculiarly competent to handle certain types of cases and there is a great opportunity for them now. And I am not referring to domestic cases, nor cases that pertain exclusively to women. As far as that goes, I have as many men as women clients."

Mrs. Penfield's long list of important cases includes those pertaining to libel, bank matters, corporation fraud, slander, and estate cases.

Ex-Pianist Brings Music Appreciation to Laymen

By Helen Fetter Cook.

OLGA SAMAROFF has meant many things to many people.

Ten years ago her name meant one of the world's brilliant pianists and the wife of Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Eight or nine years ago, after a broken arm in an auto accident, Olga Samaroff meant a foremost music critic on a New York daily.

Today, after six years of experimental work with hundreds of musical laymen, Olga Samaroff means the organizer of the most practical, effective and increasingly successful system to show people who have had no musical training how to get genuine enjoyment out of a first-class concert.

Mme. Samaroff was in town Tuesday and told a small group of leaders in local music matters how she came to have the idea in the first place and how it is working in her "laboratory classes" in New York and Philadelphia.

So sensible are her ideas and so fascinating her personality, several of these trained musicians said, after her talk, "I'd like to attend some of her classes myself."

"I have learned," she said emphatically, "that, given a certain educational experience, the layman can, in an incredibly short time, acquire a degree of musical understanding that many amateur students of singing or musical instruments may envy. I've had not a few cases where training of the ear seemed almost impossible, but I've never struck one that really couldn't be trained.

"As for the musical amateur, I have had occasion to doubt deeply the wisdom of encouraging people who are totally ungifted musically to spend hours studying an instrument.

Like all teachers who get away entirely from the beaten academic path, Mme. Samaroff finds it difficult to define classes. But she did say:

"The first step is to expose the would-be listener as frequently as possible to music with enough value for a new listener to get more out of it every time.

"We read about music to be performed on coming programs. We talk about it in simple English and nontechnical terms. I even have gotten expensive film from the telephone laboratories that shows how many vibrations there are to pound upon an unaccustomed, uneducated ear—musically speaking—when a person listens for the first time to a symphony orchestra.

ONCE SHE CHARMED audiences. Now Olga Samaroff, above, creates audiences for other pianistes to charm. A broken arm ended her career as pianiste some year ago, but she soon found another career educating the layman's ear to music.

Judge Allen Refuses to Hand Down Any Opinions to Reporter

Ethics of the Bench Forbid Her to State How She Feels on Important Issues; Says She'll Cooperate Fully to Preserve this Dignity of the Courts.

By Willie Snow Ethridge.

IT IS AN EXHORBITANT price a woman has to pay when she becomes a judge. She can no longer talk about the things she wants to.

So confided Judge Florence E. Allen, the first woman to be appointed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, as she sat in a sitting room of the Wfllard yesterday afternoon on her first visit to Washington since here elevation to the Federal bench.

Junoesque in stature, dressed simply in black with a rather severe hat on her big head, she looked just as I thought a woman judge should. Her hair is close-cropped in a boyish bob.

She is friendy in her manner and talks in a soft, pleasing voice. Frequently, a low, delightful chuckle tumbles out and her face is wreathed in smiles. She is as natural as a tree and just as comforting to be around.

Though she mourned the loss of her freedom of speech with a twinkle in her eye, it is real, nevertheless. I discovered that after about the first three minutes.

"No judge is permitted to say how he feels on any important issue," she said quietly, folding her hands across the pocketbook in her lap. "A judge must not only be unbiased; but must seem unbiased. That is the reason a judge can't talk. He must not be bound to any preconceived notions or hampered by any past remarks."

"But you can express your opinion about the fitness of women for judgeships, can't you?"

"No; I'd rather not say anything about that."

"But you do think the law is a fine profession for women?"

"I would rather not answer, if you don't mind." And she smiled very warmly to take away the brusqueness.

"You have always been an ardent feminist, haven't you?" I persisted.

"Let's don't mention that."

"And you have always been a shining liberal, haven't you? I remember how the Nation and the Christian Century threw up their hats when you were appointed."

"I appreciated their support; but I don't think we had better discuss that."

"And weren't you always a dry?"

"Oh, don't bring that up."

"But surely you can express your opinion about * * *"

"About nothing. Absolutely nothing."

"That must be awful," said I, and meant it.

"Yes, it is hard," she admitted. "I have many opinions about many things, but I have to keep them to myself. I can't take part in propaganda of any kind."

"Well, then, being a judge isn't what it is cracked up to be, is it?"

There was no answer, just a low, throaty chuckle.

"It curtails your liberty!" I accused.

"Yes, it does curtail my liberty. But as you grow older you realize it is better to think things over than to talk so much."

"Do you like being a judge?"

"There are compensations," she replied with a broad grin. "It is a wonderful thing to have a Federal judiciary opened to women. I'm proud of that fact. I am proud that Senator Bulkley recommended me for the place and that Attorney General Cummings recommended me and that President Roosevelt appointed me. I am very proud of those facts; but in a detached kind of way. Not because the honor came to me, but that it came to a woman."

There followed another series of checkmated queries, after which I blurted out: "Isn't there anything—anything that you would like to tell me."

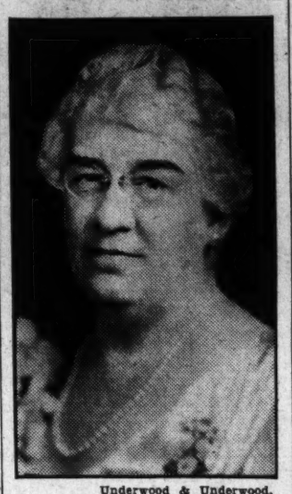
"Yes, I do want to say one thing," she admitted and her genial, kindly face grew serious. Holding my eyes with her alert ones, she said: "I do want to say that whatever restrictions there are on my office, I intend to comply with them very punctiliously. No man has ever cared more for honor and dignity of courts than I have. Whatever cooperation is essential to preserve that dignity, I shall give it in fullest measure."

Patriotic Group To Place Cross At Fort Henry

Daughters of Colonists Will Mark Spot Where First English Landed.

THE spot at Fort Henry, Va., where the first English settlers touched American soil is to be marked with a granite cross by the Daughters of the American Colonists. This is one of the three major projects the organization has undertaken for the coming year.

The other two will be the erection of a memorial at the old Rock Creek Church, the oldest church in Washington, and the purchase of a council table for the council chamber on the upper floor of the old Government building at St. Marys, Md. The dedication of the room will take place June 16, and many members of the society will make a pilgrimage there for the occasion.



Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. JOSEPH S. CALFEE directs marking of historic spots.

In April, 1607, when the first English settlers landed near where Fort Henry now stands, they planted a wooden cross, held a service of thanksgiving for a safe voyage across the Atlantic and took the new land in the name of their English King. A few days later they sought more quiet waters and made their first settlement at Jamestown.

The cross to be erected by the Daughters of the American Colonists will be located where it may be seen by passing ships as well as by motorists.

Mrs. Joseph S. Calfee, of St. Louis, newly elected president, is planning an active program of educational and patriotic work for the coming year. An important part of the program is the marking of historic spots and the preserving of historic records.

Keeping Posted

No Feminine Art.

TED SHAWN, who is out to put dancing where it originally belonged, as a definitely masculine pastime to keep men fit, brings his group of six young men to the Belasco tomorrow night to show that dancing is far from the feminine art some people think it.

All last summer and early fall in a barn studio in the Berkshires Shawn had been preparing his men for the varied and vivid program, sponsored by the 10 o'Clock Club, which they will give tomorrow.

• • • •

The barn-studio was a highly satisfactory training place. From the exterior no one would suspect it was anything but the well-preserved barn which one Thomas Carter hewed out of an eighteenth century forest.

Inside, there is a fine hard-wood floor, a wall of mirrors, and a grand piano.

She Broke Tradition.

THAT brand-new couple, Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Darneille, will come back from a week's honeymooning in Miami tomorrow.

They had a lovely wedding. Golden-haired Ruth Tennyson outstripped tradition for bridal radiance as she stood in the big, flower-filled parlor of the Darneille home, the old Massachusetts avenue house, and became Mrs. Darneille.

• • • •

Instead of the traditional white satin, this young lady, who knows how her Washington leaps from chilly spring into summer weather, chose delicate white lace for her wedding dress. Her aunt, Mrs. Florence Hyde, made the frock by hand. It created a real sensation with the graceful lines of its cobwebby beauty.

• • • •

Mrs. Darneille also broke—or perhaps "readjusted" would be the better word—still another bridal tradition when she carried gardenias with lilies of the valley in her bridal bouquet. She chose gardenias because, during the courtship, her Rodney Darneille always brought her those flowers and confessed they were his favorite.

Children Play "As You Like It"— And Do It With Verve and Skill

THIS AFTERNOON at Gunston Hall School a group of students at "Little" Gunston, the junior school, will give a special version of "As You Like It."

None of the children are over 13, some are as young as 9. Yet in the dress rehearsal Thursday afternoon they spoke the famous lines "trippingly on the tongue," as the great playwright desired, and gave much dramatic verve to their interpretations.

The abridged version is arranged by the head of Little Gunston, Mrs. Jennie Fitzhugh Kunst. Only some of the longer, more involved passages are eliminated. The essence of the work is there.

Mrs. Kunst is to be complimented on the apparent understanding the players have of the meaning of their lines. Many older amateurs have read those same lines with less comprehension.

No teacher goes back stage to guide rehearsals or performance. The children manipulate lights, curtains, roles by themselves. The children designed the invitations, designed and painted the scenery and they also helped make the costumes, which, while made of burlap, percale and cotton brocades, have been dyed so as to look like rich expensive materials when seen over the footlights.

A still younger group, from the second through the fifth grades, provide the music for the toy symphony overture arrangement of "Under the Greenwood Tree". During the play, the girls sing the same melody, one girl at first and others joining in with true intonation.

Eloise Molter is a graceful Rosalind and Frances Campbell a sympathetic Celia. Douglas Woods gives Orlando gaily, with special zest in the wrestling match. Sky Phillips is a dignified Duke Frederick. Perhaps the most dramatically gifted is Arnold Small who plays the jester, Touchstone.

The performance, which will be given at 5 o'clock this afternoon, is for the benefit of the National Symphony Orchestra. Children participating include: Peggy Ostermann and Mary Ann Donnally, who as pages, open the curtains on each scene; Catherine Fordney who reads the famous "Seven Ages of Man;" Edith Hood, Theodora Stover, Kathleen Duncan, Barbara Orr, Ann Barr, Libbie Thompson, Mary Fordney, Anne Riggs, Dony West, Evelyn Hargreaves, Patsy Kelsey, Eleanor Aleshire, Ruth Ann Cassidy, and Betty Carney.

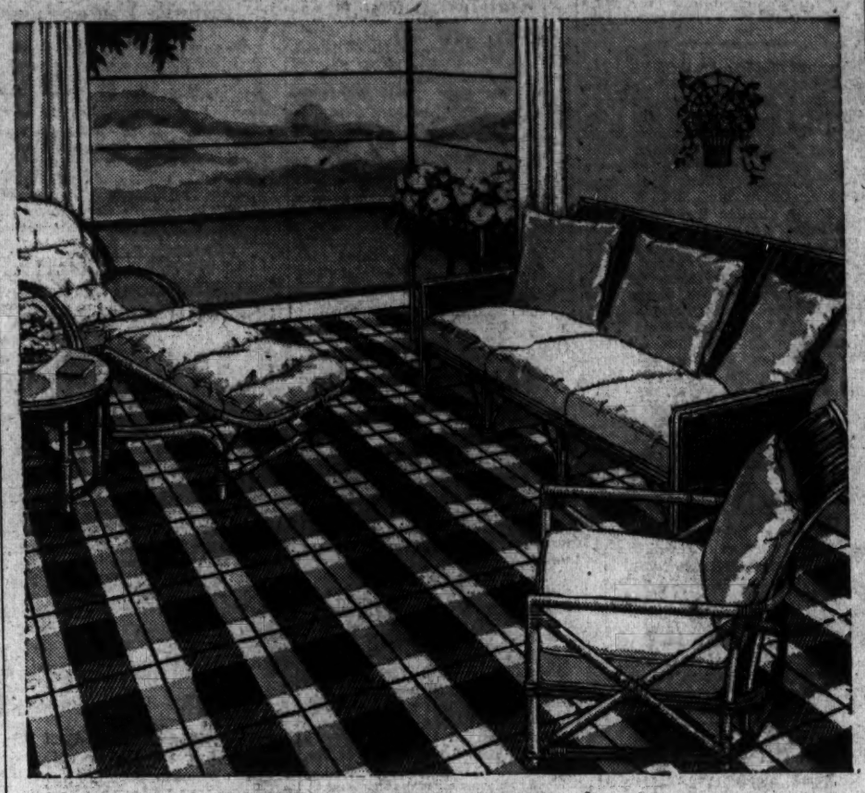
Modern Porch Carefully Ensembled As to Furniture, Rugs, Accessories



Pieces Are Informal and Modern in Their Lines.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The porch once was a place to put any old odd chairs and tables which had outlived their original usefulness. Now it's the fashion to have beautiful porches, carefully ensembled as to furniture, upholsteries, rugs and accessories, whether they are outdoors or inclosed.

That fashion is largely due to the increased numbers of sun porches with hardwood floors, radiators and often a fireplace, so closely attached to the living room that they are really a part of that room. And used both summer and winter for lounging.

Because of its informal character, furnishings for the sun porch are usually of informal type. That makes reed furniture, fiber rugs, and cotton draperies the big favorites in the planning of an ensemble.

Modern in Line.

Sun porch furniture has been among the first to respond to the influence of modern design and so you find it built comfortably low to the floor, with deep loungable seats and gay color combinations.

A three-piece suite of sofa and two chairs is the best starting point. And from these, additions such as a reclining chair (one is illustrated), end tables and a permanent card table can be made.

Upholsteries are generally homespun or other coarse weaves with colors toning in with the colors of the rug. Large, bold plaids are often used on the floor with the tones of the plaid repeated in the upholsteries.

The popular fiber rug . . . which means either plain fiber or a combination of wool-and-fiber . . . is made up in many gay designs. Plain colors, mottled effects, bright stenciled floral patterns, all sorts of modern geometrical designs, plaids and marine patterns are all in fashion.

A new kind of sun porch rug is made of cellulose fibers in bright colors with a shiny glint. Heavy hemp rope, too, is woven into effective porch rugs which may also be used on an outdoor porch.

Sunfast Curtains.

Curtains which are sunfast are, of course, most practical. And they are most comfort-giving when made so they can be drawn closed against a too brilliant sun.

The most popular color combinations are several closely related brilliant colors, such as orange-brown-and-white. But strong contrasts are often worked out in a satisfactory way, such as white, brilliant blue or green, and brilliant yellow.

Even the Indifferent Respond To These Strawberry Recipes

By Ann Barrett.

NOW IS THE TIME when folks the country over get into their strawberry stride. From just strawberries and cream or strawberry and pineapple cup, which actress Lois Moran thinks most perfect, to more elaborate desserts such as strawberry shortcake and strawberry mousse, which Prima Donna Elizabeth Rethberg prefers.

Since strawberries and pineapple are such an extra delicious combination and both in season now, too, I want to tell about this kind of fruit cup first. Easy to make—just put alternate layers of the two fruts into a bowl with powdered sugar between (using 3 cups washed, hulled berries; 1½ cups fresh, cubed pineapple and about 2-3 cup powdered sugar). Let the pineapple come out on top, and sprinkle it with 4 tablespoons chopped mint. Chill till flavors are well blended.

For a good sized strawberry shortcake, you'll need about 1 quart berries, chopped (not mashed) and sweetened with about 1 cup powdered sugar. Let these stand while you make the rich biscuit-crust as follows: Mix and sift 2 cups general-use flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons granulated sugar. Into this, lightly work 6 tablespoons to ½ cup shortening (depending on how rich you like your shortcake). Then lightly mix in just enough milk to hold ingredients together (about 2-3 cup). Pat mixture into 1 large cake to fit 8 or 9 inch greased layer-cake tin. Bake at 425 F., about 12 minutes.

Dont' make this cake heavy by cutting it when it is done. Score around the middle of outside edge with sharp knife. Put clean white cord in this incision, cross this in front of you and gently draw it through cake. Then butter the cut surface with 4 tablespoons butter and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons powdered sugar. Next heap the berries between these layers and top with sweetened, whipped cream and whole berries. That will be eating! Only plan a simple meal ahead of it, for it's almost a meal in itself.

Strawberry Mousse.

For a less bulky, but rich and delicious strawberry dessert, mousse made like this is your number. Add ½ cup granulated sugar to 1½ cups washed, hulled berries, and crush. Then beat till sugar is dissolved, add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and chill. Next fold in 1 cup heavy cream (whipped first) and 1 egg-white (beaten stiff with pinch salt). Turn into automatic refrigerator tray and freeze without stirring.

Nut Cake.

½ pound ground almonds.
6 ground bitter almonds.
½ pound sugar.
½ pound fresh butter.
4 eggs.
Peel of 1 lemon, chopped fine.
2 teaspoons rum.

Mix well together and allow to stand about an hour. Work well and roll into two round layers, ½ inch thick. Spread jam on one and cover with the other. Sprinkle with sugar and bake for half to three-quarters of an hour.

Meat, Vegetable Loaf Receives Weekly Prize

Lamb and Asparagus Temptation Submitted by Miss Marchand.

ALDEANE A. MARCHAND, of 2879 Rhode Island avenue northeast, has been awarded the $5 weekly prize for submitting the lamb and asparagus loaf recipe.

The hostess who wishes to give her luncheon guests a wholesome, and at the same time appetizing and attractive meal, will not be disappointed if she serves the following meat and vegetable loaf:

Lamb and Asparagus Temptation.

1 large bunch asparagus
2 cups chopped lamb
1 cup celery (chopped)
2 tablespoons gelatin
2 slices of pineapple (chopped)
½ tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
2 cups tomato juice
stuffed olives

Wash the asparagus, cut in even lengths and cook carefully so it will retain its shape when tender. Line a loaf pan bottom and sides with the asparagus. Heat the tomato juice to boiling point, add sugar, vinegar and salt, and stir well. Add the gelatin softened in a little cold water. When well blended add the lamb, celery and pineapple. Mix well and allow to cool to room temperature. Then pour the mixture carefully into the asparagus lined mold and put away to harden. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with olives.

All entries in the weekly recipe prize contest should be addressed to the Food Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Myasthenia Gravis.

Myasthenia gravis is a very serious disease and can be expected to terminate in death. It is characterized by great muscular weakness and eventually by much wasting of muscles. It appears that a woman has discovered a remedy for this disease. While it may never prove to be a cure, it seems established that it can be used to keep the patient in reasonably good health and strength for years. This woman has not only proved the value of the remedy by using it on herself for about five years, but she is in contact with 100 other cases and through her reporting she has opened up a new field for treatment. The woman is Dr. Harriet Edgeworth. This is an abstract of her story, as she wrote it in April, 1930.

In December, 1918, she had an attack of influenzal pneumonia. After recovering she had a relapse which was characterized by great prostration and this kept her in bed for several months. During the next five years she was able to work reasonably well, but she did not have much endurance.

In 1924 she began to see double at times and her eyelid drooped a little. Later in the year she was out on a case most of one night and noticed that she had difficulty raising her foot to step up on a curb.

By the spring of 1925 her double vision and drooping of the eyelid was worse and she lost control over some eye muscles. She had no endurance and her muscles were very weak. She could not comb her hair. A little later she could not swallow and a diagnosis of myasthenia gravis was made. In 1927 she was totally helpless and chewing, swallowing and breathing were difficult.

Then began a search for a treatment by herself and her medical friends, during the course of which she was in more than one hospital and clinic. She knew the fate with which she was confronted and had no hesitation about submitting herself to experimentation. Finally, ephedrine was tried out.

In April, 1930, she wrote: "In a few days I was able to rise from a chair unaided and to walk the distance of the room. I am now able to walk the distance of several rooms, to get in and out of a car with small help and to speak and chew without difficulty. I can raise my arms to my head for a few minutes, write a short letter and read the morning newspaper without seeing double."

Dr. W. M. Boothby said: "To Harriet Edgeworth belongs the credit for the discovery and demonstration of the effects of ephedrine in myasthenia gravis."

What Today Means

"Taurus"

If April 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:25 to 10:25 a. m., from 1:25 to 3:25 p. m. and from 7:25 to 9:25 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:25 a. m. to 1:25 p. m., from 4:25 to 6:25 p. m. and from 10:25 p. m. to 12:25 a. m.

If in your social or business life on this date, you are thrown into contact with a person, who, through their being born in a very humble environment, may by some be classified as not being "to the manner born," prove your own gentility by extending to them every considerate courtesy possible. Family traditions nor social position ever justifies rudeness, and many a so-called gentleman and gentlewoman forfeit their right to that classification by indulging in social snobbishness. You will prove your personal right to social recognition as well as gain the respect of your friends by the daily practice of civility.

If a woman and born on April 28, with your indomitable courage and bright mentality, there is nothing can retard your attaining any goal you aspire to reach. You must never allow yourself to become discouraged. Knowing your own ability, have sufficent self-confidence, and others, in time will be forced to recognize it. Bear in mind our limitations are only boundaries we establish ourselves. So make yours limitless.

The child born on April 28, when old enough to understand, should be taught to admire and respect people, who through good example, or by doing good for humanity, have accomplished results that entitle them to have its highest regard. In this way the child may be trained to discriminate between worth-while accomplishments of men and women who have been benefactors to our race and those who have been in reality detrimental. The latter, through romantic glamour, receive youth's hero-worshiping adoration, simply because the young mind has not been taught how to distinguish between the substantially good man and woman and those unworthy of consideration.

BACHELOR—of ARTS

By John Erskine

The Story So Far.

Alec, so nicknamed as a joke because his last name was Hamilton, was the son of a well-to-do manufacturer. The first half of Alec's sophomore year at Columbia saw the crash of his world. He had been just an average boy—a student without distinction, a scrub sportsman, and a failure as a glee club tenor. He had fallen in love at first sight, got in debt, been pampered by his family, and then discovered his father a financial ruin. The heroine is a lovable, red-headed student named Mimi, a modern, independent, straight-shooting youngster. Students and at least one professor fell in love with her, and she fell for Alec. There was also Glady, the blonde college widow, who had marked Alec for slaughter. Two other vital characters were Professor and his young wife, who taught Alec something of life. The tragedy of Neal, a boy who had to die, also left its imprint on Alec's character.

Broke and faced with the possibility of having to leave college, Alec finally found a job in a restaurant. There he suffered the humiliation of waiting on the girl he loved, accompanied by Prof. Woolsey, his strongest rival. In bitter rebellion he dashed back to the fraternity house and took on for that evening the job of gigolo. Mimi learns of this escapade and throws him over. His sisters visit him. Beatrice becomes engaged to Wally, one of his classmates, and Laura is attracted to Weinstein.

SENIOR year was for Alec a series of revelations, depth after depth, all of them thought-stirring.

In the first place, Beatrice and Wally, having married at the end of his junior year, proceeded promptly to have a child, and the months thereafter were for Alec an education in the process of becoming an uncle. He would have supposed that the arrival of a nephew would make him feel old, but the effect was not so. The bulletins which came from Arizona showed his little sister in a new light. Where had she learned so much? Where had she hidden the resources of tenderness and of devotion which even he could glimpse in the more feminine parts of her letters, when his mother shared them with him?

Later, when she came back to Trenton, so that the baby might see day in Atterbury street, where her own childhood had begun, he was startled by the serene poise with which she carried her dear burden. When she wasn't noticing he would watch her face.

So he was an uncle before he was a bachelor of arts! Beatrice would have been at his commencement, of course, if the baby, that morning, had not developed a mild attack of snuffles. Wally came, but looked worried. He explained the case to those who would listen.

In the second place, there was the new development in Tom, who had acquired his sheepskin a year sooner, and under pressure from Father Illings had entered the business school to become an expert in advertising. It wasn't the advertising that surprised Alec, but the moral uplift. Tom, if you please, began to feel concerned about the shortcomings of society and, without humor, dedicated himself to reforms. Alec got the first impact during rushing season of his last year, one night when they were helping the youngsters at the house.

"I've an idea," Tom announced. "You and I ought to mop up this place."

They were sitting in the study, Alec with his cigarette, Tom with his pipe. Across the hall they could watch the prospects in their innocence, corteously entertained at the pool table by the sophomores. From upstairs came sudden laughter. Downstairs some stranger began to play their ancestral piano, but became discouraged.

"Mop up?" asked Alec.

"When I listen to the line we're handing out to these incoming babes I see how dishonest you and I are."

"Speak for yourself!"

"No, we're all accessories. We talk about brotherhood and fellowship, and equity and justice, and God knows what, but we're looking only for a large delegation to pay the bills, and we take in anything that's solvent and for the moment not wanted by the police."

"What's biting you?"

"The place ought to be cleaned up, that's all! We ought to list the complaints, bring them up at the Monday meeting, and make the fellows put them through."

"For instance?"

"They ought to pay their bills!"

Alec scratched the back of his head. "Theoretically, I agree, but I'd be a rotten example. I'm always a month or two behind. That happened to you, once or twice, didn't it?"

"Quite another thing," said Tom firmly. "We entered college in easy-going years, but with the world in its present condition, we need more character."

"I'm with you, of course, but if you bring that up any Monday night you'll have to do the talking. What's your next point?"

"Some of the grads use the house for a rowdy club, especially over Sundays."

"You mean that poker party?"

"Yes. When a game goes over two nights it's rowdy, and they shouldn't be sending the sophomores out to fetch liquor."

Alec nodded. "Remember that time we played strip in freshman year, and my father wrote I must either learn the game or quit?"

Tom refused to smile. "That's different, again. Our attitude was more careless and impromptu. These fellows play like professionals. And they've got to cut out the women."

Remembering Gladys, Alec looked Tom in the eye. To his credit, the student of advertising blushed. "I wasn't a saint myself, but perhaps that's just the reason why we ought to protect the youngsters. We know it's wrong; they don't have to burn their fingers, too, do they?"

Alec refused to commit himself. "Anyway," Tom went on, "they oughtn't to bring girls to the house. There's a place for everything."

Alec went over to the hearth and threw away his finished cigarette. He was remembering the Whistle girls. The right place, apparently, was a porch.

He lighted another cigarette. I'm not much of a moral uplifter, old man," he began rather sadly. "I don't know enough. I must first work out a few things for myself."

Tom flashed back to friendly confidences. "How are you getting on with Mimi, now? I thought you were engaged."

"In a way we are. At least she's wearing my ring."

"Don't you love each other?"

"That's funny! I never cared for anybody else and, as she says, she can't get me out of her system. But there's a shadow between us."

"Go on! That girl's cuckoo about you! Don't you know women? She wouldn't have looked you up again if she hadn't wanted you."

"She can't forget Gladys."

Tom laughed outright. "Lucky for you she can't! That's your best asset! That's what made her come running back. Man, but you're young!"

Alec rubbed his mop of hair with a meditative hand. "I don't believe you understand her. She isn't like other girls."

Tom grinned. "None of them are. That's their lone suit. But if you assume, roughly, that they have a few points of resemblance, you won't be far off."

"How did you learn this?"

The question flattered Tom. "Long life and careful study, my boy!"

"But you'd like to withhold this wisdom from your younger brethren!"

"That's different," said Tom. "Honestly, now, don't you feel their ideals are lower than ours? They're so immature! Even if you overlook the poker playing, the drink and the women, you've got to draw the line somewhere. D'you notice how many of them speak of the fraternity as the 'frat?' I call that lowdown! It indicates an essential lack of self-respect, as though you referred in public to your mother as 'mut.' It's bad propaganda for the fraternity system, I can tell you that. You can poison the public mind by the use of the wrong word.

"What we ought to get over to all outsiders is the impression that fraternity life is to us sacred, a little awe-inspiring, that it holds us up to our best; that it cultivates dignity and distinction. 'Fraternity' is a noble word if you just listen to it and say all the syllables distinctly, not too fast, but if you're too lazy to get beyond the first syllable, we mustn't be surprised if our critics suggest that fraternities be abolished."

Tom kept his word. When the chapter met for its weekly overhauling, Monday night, he laid before the brethren in substance the program which he had suggested to Alec. Some of his proposals were more cordially received than others. The plea for the payment of debts was widely seconded by the house treasurer, who, supposing too rashly that the millennium had arrived, started to read out the names of delinquents, with the sums in default. The gathering with practical unanimity declined this information. They compromised by hearing the list of tradesmen who threatened to sue.

They All LOVE MILK this Way

(A new method for giving children milk)

MOTHERS who have trouble in getting their children to drink enough milk should try this simple method: Stir a tablespoonful or two of KING Syrup into a glass of milk and have the kiddies try THAT! King Syrup gives a distinctive and delicious taste to milk. And, more than that, it actually aids the digestion. (Due to its high Dextrine content). Just try giving your children milk this delightful new way, and watch the excellent results.

Katharine Cornell Proves "Road" Can Be Revived—Lee Tracy Film Is Reviewed

Grand Tour Is Evidence That Theater Lives

Boxoffice Records Broken; Exit Children's Season; About Showshops.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

In corroboration of the insistence of Theresa Helburn and Lee Simonson, executive directors of the Theater Guild of New York, that "the road" is dead only to those attractions in which the public has no faith, and very much alive to those in which it has confidence, it is interesting to note that Katharine Cornell, who this season is making the most extensive tour undertaken by any player of importance since Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson farewelled America in 1915-16, has already traveled almost 15,000 miles and in the next fortnight faces one of the busiest periods of the whole trip.

Everywhere she has played, capacity crowds have greeted her every appearance. Record receipts have been hung up for single performances in cities long deemed impervious to the blandishments of the Broadway theater.

Since Miss Cornell left New York last November, she has appeared in 255 cities in 26 States and established new box office records for Shakespeare, Shaw and Besier.

Motive Altruistic.

But it was not to break records that Miss Cornell took to the road this season. In fact, she is said to have had grave doubts that receipts would equal expenses on the grand swing.

She did, however, believe that the speaking stage had a public, if it only could be persuaded to have confidence once more in the theater, and that it is essential that the theater reclaim the country at large or perish by being confined to a few single communities like a hothouse plant.

This is the view, precisely, that is entertained by Miss Helburn, Mr. Simonson and the other members of the board of directors of the Theater Guild. That is why they are sending both "Mary of Scotland" and "Ah, Wilderness," the two biggest hits of the Guild's current season, on the road next year, the first to visit 44 cities; the second, 60-odd.

Aims at Specific Public.

It is significant that, like Miss Cornell, Eva Le Gallienne and a very few others, the Guild has built a firm foundation of public confidence by pursuing an unwavering policy of fair dealing and fair prices. It frankly produces plays that it thinks the public will buy. Its productions are aimed straight at the tastes and pocketbooks of the great artistic bourgeoisie, as Mr. Simonson describes it, that has the discriminating taste to appreciate a serious drama worth $3.30 a seat and the $3.30 with which to buy it when it comes along. It has never misrepresented, never overcharged and never compromised with a high ideal of accomplishment and service.

The eminent success of Miss Cornell's tour, predicated upon an identical viewpoint and practice, proves the Guild's argument to be sound and virtually assures the success of its elaborate plans for reviving "the road" next season and restoring the American theater to something at least remotely approximating its predepression position and prosperity.

The great American public may love to be fooled, as the late Phineas T. Barnum was so wont to observe, but not by a counterfeit Broadway theater at $3.30 a copy.

Miss Cornell, the Guild, Miss Le Gallienne and the others of vision and courage who are willing to undertake to remedy a sorry situation, are to be applauded for attempting to undo the harm inflicted upon "the road" by the unscrupulous Broadway chiselers. More power to them.

The second Washington season the Children's Theater comes to a close tomorrow morning in the National Theater with Ruskin's "King of the Golden River," sixth and last in the series of Saturday morning plays for children presented here by the Children's Theater of New York, under the sponsorship of the Women's International League.

In saying farewell to the children's plays for the current season, it is perhaps timely to congratulate the Theater, its sponsors and all those who have had a part in bringing this unique institution to Washington for their selection of plays and players and their deserved popularity. It will be hoped by many parents that the Women's International League will feel justified in undertaking another season in the Capital.

Manager Stephen E. Cochran of the National Theater, whose National Theater Players will inaugurate their tenth annual spring and summer season next Monday night with first Washington presentations of the current Broadway hit, "The Pursuit of Happiness," yesterday paid a visit to the White House to extend to President and Mrs. Roosevelt, through Marvin H. McIntyre of the Presidential secretariat, an invitation to attend the opening performance of the Players Monday night, or any other performance during the week that might better suit their convenience.

During Mr. Cochran's presence in Mr. McIntyre's office a request was telephoned for Presidential support of a proposed benefit concert for the National Symphony Orchestra, proceeds to be applied to the fund for the continuance through another season of the splendid organization Conductor Hans Kindler has built up.

Proffered Theater.

Sensing the need of such an occasion, Mr. Cochran promptly proffered free use of the National Theater and its staff for the benefit. This is a project which, if successfully consummated—and there is no supportable reason why it should not be—will be not only a great boon to the professional musicians of the Capital, but a great impetus to Washington's cultural development as well.

There are certain civic and charitable enterprises which the National Theater always has unfailingly supported without thought of financial return. The Actor's Fund Benefit is one; the Knights of Columbus Christmas parties another. And there are still more.

Speaking of the Actors' Fund Benefit, the list of participants in the one schedule for the National a week from next Sunday, May 6, under the personal direction of Daniel Frohman, dean of the American theater, is constantly growing in both numbers and importance. In addition to those already announced to come to Washington for this gala occasion, late word from Mr. Frohman indicates that Fred Keating, the magician who turned out to be a first-rate leading man; Herbert Rawlinson, well known locally by virtue of having been master of ceremonies at Loew's Fox, and who was last seen here as leading man in Rachel Crothers' "When Ladies Meet," in which Spring Byington, now at the National in "Jig Saw," also was prominently cast in her unforgettable role of Bridgie; Robert Emmett Keane, master of ceremonies at the Inaugural Benefit a year ago last month; Claire Whitney and Helen Broderick, of "As Thousands Cheer," also will be among those present. What a bill!

Ted Shawn Coming.

Ted Shawn and his company of male dancers will give a program for the benefit of the Ten o'Clock Club next Sunday evening at 8:45 in the Shubert-Belasco Theater. The choreography will be entirely concerned with masculine activities, symbolizing the warrior, the hunter, the pioneer, the laborer, the sportsman and the explorer of uncharted seas.

Mr. Shawn will be featured in at least six solo numbers, among which are some of his most popular creations, such as "Invocation to the Thunderbird" and "A Study of St. Francis of Assisi."

Among the ensembled numbers are "Music Visualizations," "Dances of Labor and Play" and "Religious Dances."

Jesse Meeker, composer-pianist, will accompany the group.

A cordial and enthusiastic note from Gracie Barrie, playing the Palace Theater in Cleveland, brings the excited word that Gracie will be back in Washington for the weeks of June 1 and 8. Her engagement will be at the Earle Theater, where all of her local triumphs have been scored, with the exception of her appearance at the National in "Forward March," which went on to success in New York under the title of "Strike Me Pink," with Jimmy Durante and Lupe Velez starred.

Gracie will be booked into the Earle as an act, and not as mistress of ceremonies, in which capacity, it will be remembered, she succeeded Maxine Doyle last September. It will be nice to have Gracie back. She is a talented and charming young woman.

Five-Alarm Lupe!

And with Lupe Velez, abovementioned, coming to the stage of Loew's Fox, in person, the week of May 18, it is not too early for City Manager Carter Barron and the D. C. F. D. to begin fireproofing the theater and putting up the lightning rods.

It was she Benjamin Franklin discovered with his kite and that key!

Straight From the Studios

Charlie Farrell Sets Out for Fling at English Film; "Affairs of Cellini" Brilliant Costume Drama; Scattered Chatter From Hollywood.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, April 26—Charlie Farrell has hearkened to Europe's request that he come over and make a picture.

CHARLES FARRELL.

It's the fashion of the day, you know, to take a fling at English studio experience, and the picture which lures Farrell is one that will be directed by Monte Banks, former comedian in this country, with Jessie Matthews as leading woman, and Gregory Ratoff in the principal character role. Farrell will leave the end of this week, and return in August.

Virginia Valli will not be able to accompany her husband, owing to local stage engagements, but will set out for England about ten days later.

"The Affairs of Cellini," Costume Picture.

Probably the most brilliant of the costume pictures yet to arrive is "The Affairs of Cellini," adaptation of the stage play, "The Firebrand," by Edwin Justus Mayer, which with modern inflection portrays the character of Benevenuto Cellini, the famous Florentine artisan. The picture is exceptionally well cast and directed, and is rich with amusement. The preview audience seemed captivated by the comedy and intrigue, in which the hero figures, though as scarcely more than a pawn moved about in a game between the Duke and Duchess of Florence.

Easily the most successful performance is that of Frank Morgan in the role that he enacted on the stage, namely, the Duke. Morgan has never had a better chance in pictures, and he makes the most of every minute of it. Constance Bennett and Fredric March are starred in the picture, and are well adapted to the characters that they present. March seems to qualify as the romantic type.

Fay Wray is surprisingly good in an entirely new sort of impersonation. It is the brilliant dialogue, the manner in which the picture is staged, and the excellent direction by Gregory La Cava that render this cinema event notable.

"Twentieth Century" Story of Theater.

Stories of stage life flock thick and fast. "Glamour," "Stand Up and Cheer," "I Married An Actress," now in the making, and various others which have either arrived or are arriving. In the midst of this procession comes "Twentieth Century, Limited," shown in preview, wildest of all in exhibiting the fervors and follies of the theatrical temperament.

Adapted from the play by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, a moderate success of a season ago, it promises to enjoy the favor especially of the smart audiences. With John Barrymore and Carole Lombard demonstrating how much they can love and hate each other, as producer and star, respectively, the action goes on at a speedy pace, punctuated constantly with comedy.

The stage play all occurred aboard a train bound from Chicago to New York, but the film departs from this, building its events from the start of the heroine's career and depicting the break-up between herself and the producers, all of which happened before the curtain first rose on the play version.

"Twentieth Century, Limited," is good entertainment. It is better in many ways than the original; broader in appeal, certainly, and it affords Barrymore one of the most striking roles he has done in recent pictures. Miss Lombard in several recent films has evidenced growing surety in her portrayals, and this is easily, I believe, the most interesting and the best. Both principals will be approved, and that excellent actor, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Ralph Forbes and others are well represented, under direction of Howard Hawks.

"I'LL TELL THE WORLD." Universal picturization of a story by Lincoln Quarberg and Lieut. Comdr. Frank Mead, starring Lee Tracy, with Gloria Stuart, Roger Pryor, Alec Francis and Lawrence Grant. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Reviewed Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

He did! Tell the world, that is.

Indeed, with Lee Tracy playing the part of the United Press Association's star roving reporter, there could be no doubt of it. If it is fun to stop the presses on a single newspaper, how much more fun it would be to stop them on 1,800!

That the cinema should eventually take in international news gatherings associations might be a foregone conclusion, but in so doing, it has not appreciably changed the method of relating the reporter's life. It is still exaggerated—and, of greater import, still exciting and thoroughly entertaining.

Tracy's first roving assignment is to Hudson Bay to cover—and get a scoop on—the landing of a stratosphere dirigible. That is mere child's play, so forthwith he is sent to Europe to unravel the mysterious "reunion in Vichy." Out of this melee, including a sudden attack of acute cardiac trouble, Lee garners himself a queen for a wife. And they all lived happily ever after—or until the cinema needs another reporter!

It is the same old story dressed up in new garments—thousands of papers rather than one, rival press associations instead of papers, and royalty instead of petty miscreants. But it is completely fascinating, a No. 1 entertainment that keeps you all but cheering the hero on to greater glories.

Notwithstanding the domination of the picture by Mr. Tracy, Gloria Stuart, never better as the about-to-be, may-be queen; Roger Pryor, as the rival pressman; Alec Francis, as Miss Stuart's true adviser, and Lawrence Grant, as the perfidious friend, do have their moments.

Willard Robertson and Leon Waycoff are plausible editors.

Besides the new issue of Universal News, there is "The Pest," a short subject that tries to combine James Barton's bibulous comedy sketch with a variety show with something less than happy results.

Ladies Aid Plans Fete in Damascus

Wider F St. Loan Asked Of $100,000

PWA Fund Sought to Remove Steps From Patent Building.

Present Bottleneck Held to Be Handicap to Through Traffic.

A grant of $100,000, to permit remodelling of the south side of the old Patent Office Building, so that F street, between Seventh and Ninth streets, may be widened to allow two-way traffic, was asked of the Public Works Administration yesterday by the Office of Public Buildings and Parks of the Interior Department.

The project, which has been strongly urged by the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, also has received the approval of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission.

Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals has offered to use $30,000 of Street Department funds to pay for paving work on the streets, to expedite the project. He deems it of prime importance that F street, one of the Capital's principal traffic arteries, should have two-way through traffic.

Street's Width Reduced.

Because the steps of the Patent Office jut out to such an extent that the street is narrowed, only eastbound traffic is at present allowed on the thoroughfare. Persons having business in the building use the more direct entry from the Seventh and Ninth street sidewalks.

The huge pile of stones, which form the south entry, have been condemned by the Fine Arts Commission as marring the beauty of the building. The commission, after viewing the site last week, declared the south side of the building should be altered to conform with the architectural scheme of the Federal building program.

Remodeling Approved.

Plans for remodeling the building so as to permit removal of the steps and thereby provide an additional 32 feet of street space have been approved by the Fine Arts and National Park and Planning Commissions.

As it now stands, the steps create a traffic "bottle-neck" requiring west-bound traffic to detour either north or south from F street when Seventh street is reached.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer blames the narrowness of the street and the "bend" in the street car tracks as a major cause of traffic congestion in that area.

Virginia Damage Jury Returns $5,555 Verdict

Richmond, April 27 (Spl.).—Two colored men sat on the 12-man Federal jury here today which awarded William Braxton, New York colored man, a $5,555 verdict in a personal injury suit against W. L. Simmons and J. P. Whitlaw.

The suit was the outgrowth of an automobile crash, for which the plaintiff asked $25,000 damages.

Special Events Planned Here In Boys' Week

All-Day Outing Will Climax Shore in National Observance.

The American boy will occupy the National spotlight for the week beginning today, designated officially as National Boys' Week.

Special events will be conducted by the Boys Club of Washington, starting today with an elimination horseshoe tournament at the clubhouse, and a special program in the evening, with several guest speakers.

Monday the Games Rooms championships will be decided, with contests in pocket billiards, bingo and lotto. Tuesday an indoor baseball game will be played against an opponent to be named later.

Ping-pong and checker championships, open to any boy in Washington between 10 and 18, will be held Wednesday at the clubhouse. Thursday nearly 300 boys will be the guests of the Earle Theater. A special boxing and wrestling show is scheduled for Friday.

The celebrations will be climaxed next Saturday, when an all-day outing will be held in Rock Creek Park. The Rotary Club will furnish transportation. Baseball and other athletic events will feature the day. The boys will bring their own lunches.

An intraclub swimming meet will be held Saturday at 7 p. m. at the Y. M. C. A. pool.

Californians Plan To Honor Measday

McAdoo's Secretary to Be Paid Tribute Tonight.

A farewell ceremony will be accorded Walter Measday, secretary to Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, when the California State Society holds its final dance of the season at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest at 9 p. m. today.

Measday will leave for Los Angeles Monday to become supervisor of foreign and domestic commerce for the Los Angeles District. He managed the campaign of Senator McAdoo during the last election, and also was associated with President Wilson as secretary of his campaign in 1916.

The California delegation in Congress will be buests of honor at the affair.

Education!

Virginia State Police to Study Crime Tactics.

Richmond, April 27 (AP).—It is education criminals have got to combat in Virginia. Motor Vehicle Director John Q. Rhodes will put his 100 State officers and 50 recruits—many of them college men—through an intensive 30-day training period, beginning Monday.

Guns Will Be Studied.

The State rifle range at Camp Pollard, Virginia Beach, will be used. The men will be trained not only in the use of machine guns, but in textbook knowledge of police law, repair and upkeep of motor equipment, use of small arms, mob control, highway patrol, riot quelling and other police technicalities. It will be the third annual encampment of the State police.

"Some of the Nation's foremost instructors in these subjects will be employed," Rhodes said.

Commenting on the subject of recent turns in the hijacking game, Rhodes said:

"Already we have experienced some of this new racket. Since liquor has become legal, hijacking of other goods, especially cigarettes in Virginia, has become frequent. Besides curbing the crime, we are facing another problem—insurance. Most of the hijacking trucks carry insurance, and if this racket is allowed to continue, it naturally will follow that insurance rates will increase by leaps and bounds."

2,524 in Virginia Ask Liquor License

26 Inspectors Kept Busy Holding Examinations.

Richmond, April 27 (Spl.).—The 26 inspectors examining 2,524 applicants for licenses under the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board have completed their work in 23 cities and 24 counties, T. K. Sexton, chief of the division, announced today.

The division also has had to inspect warehouses in 14 cities, seeking approval as wine distributing points. Richmond will serve as the base of the inspection division until a district organization can be set up, Mr. Sexton said.

Third Expansion Vote Sought.

Moorefield, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—A third vote on the question of extending this municipality's borders will be asked, it was disclosed today, in a petition to be filed by proponents from the outlying area proposed for incorporation.

4,000 in AAA Patrols March This Morning

Schoolboy Contingents of Four States Here for Parade.

Four thousand boys and girls will march to the blare of bands in the American Automobile Association's schoolboy atrol parade here this morning.

The first contingent of visiting patrol members, 100 boys and girls from Tabor, N. C., arrived Thursday night, and 600 more from nearby States reached Washington yesterday. By the time the parade begins, all of the 1,000 expected from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina will be in line.

At least seven bands will be in the parade, led by the United States Navy Band, which will take its place near the reviewing stand following the march up Pennsylvania avenue.

In the reviewing stand will be the members of the Cabinet, delegates from the Senate and the House and other dignitaries interested in the schoolboy patrol movement.

The line of march is from John Marshall place, at 10:30 a. m., up Pennsylvania avenue to Fifteenth street northwest, south on Fifteenth street on Constitution avenue and west to the Ellipse. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will be grand marshal of the parade.

U. S. Crime Drive Rewards Favored

House Backs Payments for 'Public Enemies.

A bill to authorize the Justice Department to pay rewards for nationally sought criminals considered "public enemies" was approved yesterday by the House Judiciary Committee, the Associated Press reports.

Introduced by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, the measure would authorize an appropriation of $25,000 to be used in the discretion of the Attorney General for information or rewards.

The committee approved another measure providing that after the expiration of the statute of limitations, if an indictment were found defective or otherwise insufficient, another could be brought in the next teram of court while the grand jury was sitting.

Virginia to Get Fugitive.

Frankfort, Ky., April 27 (AP).—Extradition of C. C. Stanley, charged with having escaped from a Virginia penitentiary road force in 1918, was granted today by Gov. Ruby Laffoon.

Claymont Sale Attracts 1,000

Bushrod Washington Home Scene of Furniture Auction Which Draws Many Interested in Revolutionary War History of Virginia.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Public sale of the furniture at Claymont, historic residence built and formerly occupied by Bushrod Washington, nephew of George Washington, attracted a record crowd of more than 1,000 people here yesterday.

The home is at present owned by Mrs. R. H. Fletcher. It was once owned and occupied by Frank R. Stockton, author of "The Tiger and the Lady," and other literary works.

Bushrod Washington erected the structure late in the eighteenth century, when he moved to this vicinity from tidewater Virginia to join his uncles, Samuel and Charles Washington. Bushrod was a member of Col. Mercer's volunteer troops, and a justice of the United States Supreme Court.

The home has been known to modern county residents as the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Murphy, the fame of the value of whose household equipment and furnishings was responsible for attracting the crowds at yesterday's sale. The home has not been occupied for a number of years, and yesterday's liquidation of the equipment was an effort to utilize its value rather than allowing it to remain idle, Mrs. Fletcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, said.

Reports that the home had been purchased by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Winchester, were denied yesterday by Mrs. Fletcher. The house is for sale, she said, but no purchaser has yet appeared.

Open Hearing Slated to Fix Parking Rules

Public Will Be Asked to Decide on Downtown Regulations.

Merchants Urge 1-Hour Limit to Replace All-Day Ban.

A public hearing to determine whether the all-day parking ban in certain sections of the business area shall be continued or be modified as suggested by a committee representing trade bodies, will be recommended by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Although expressing interest in the proposal of the joint committee of trade bodies which asked abandonment of the all-day parking ban and the institution of a rush-hour ban in the commercial district, Commissioner Hazen said the present restriction will remain until the public hearing is held.

The committee proposed yesterday that parking be prohibited from 8 to 9:30 a. m. and 4 to 6 p. m. in the area bounded by K street, Pennsylvania avenue, Fifth street and Fifteenth street.

One-Hour Parking Urged.

In this area, the committee suggested one-hour parking limits, except during the period of absolute restriction.

Immediate withdrawal of all no-parking permits issued to particular stores and the establishment of a zone of 100 feet in each block on both sides of the street, for loading and unloading merchandise for stores, was recommended in place of present loading zones.

The committee indorsed proposed legislation which would empower the Police Department to impound automobiles parked in violation of traffic regulations. A study by the Public Utilities Commission on street car loading platforms in the business area, also was recommended with a view to ascertaining if any may be modified or removed to expedite traffic.

Cooperation Offered.

To aid in the parking problems, the joint committee offered to cooperate through the trade body memberships by eliminating the handling of merchandise shipments during rush hours, preventing overtime parking by store employes, and to aid in a general campaign to educate the private car operator in the observance of all parking restrictions.

The recommendations proposed as an alternative to the drastic all-day parking prohibition on portions of F, G and Seventh streets were offered by a committee headed by Claude W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade; William C. Miller, president of the Chamber of Commerce; James E. Colliflower, of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, and C. L. Kaufman, president of the Seventh Street Business Men's Association.

Disbarment Petition Dismissed in Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—A court of three judges here last night decided to dismiss a petition in which the Norfolk and Portsmouth Bar Association asked that W. Shepherd Drewry be disbarred from the practice of law.

Mr. Drewry was given a public reprimand by the court, which held that "the evidence discloses that W. Shepherd Drewry's associations were the type which should be avoided by a careful practitioner and the court wishes to warn him in the form of a reprimand for these associations."

D. C. Officials Oppose Barber Regulation Bill

Opposition to a bill to regulate barbering and providing for appointment of a board of barber examiners was expressed by the District Commissioners yesterday in a report to the Senate District Committee.

On recommendation of the corporation counsel's office the Commissioners' objections were based on a conflict of the proposed law with the present laws relating to collection of fees and the existing sanitary law relating to barber shops.

Convicted of Manslaughter.

Lewisburg, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.)—In the Greenbrier County Circuit Court here, Otis Cole, colored, was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Paul Turner. The shooting occurred several weeks ago at the home of L. D. Williams, at Leslie.

Romance, History and Piety Fill New City Directory Pages

Love, Adam and Eve Among Names, Also 46 George Washingtons as Well as Namesakes of Dozen Other Presidents.

The District of Columbia
City Directory for 1934; Authors, The People.
As Reviewed by Frederic B. Tuttle.

Romance and history, piety and fantasy combine to hold reader interest at a high pitch in the new District of Columbia Directory, which made its appearance yesterday in libraries, bookshops, business offices and all places where good literature is appreciated.

Produced by 335,800 individual authors, representing the unusual and the common people, the enormous volume immediately will be devoured by book lovers throughout the Capital. It is by far the most comprehensive, the best thing the common people, speaking through the medium of the R. L. Polk Press, yet have done.

Bound in apple green, with a cherry-red back, and baring gold and brown lettering on the covers, the volume is attractive enough to hold the eye of the most exacting collector. But it is not until one has turned its 2,356 pags that one realizes the comprehensive coverage and adriot treatment given its diversified subjects.

The love interest is furnished by dozens of Washingtonians, living in all parts of the District, who bear Love as a last name. The romantic strain is further preserved by the fact that Adam and Eve dwell within the District, though perhaps they do not even know ach other.

Adam is James Adam, the book reveals, and he lives in the 1900 block of F street northwest. Eve is Mrs. Nora Eve, and her home is in Takoma Park. It seems the authors might have covered this phase more thoroughly, for the reader is left in mid-air.

Unfortunately the authors were unable to disclose a Romeo and Juliet or a Pierre and Pierrette. The work seems further to have missed the mark due to the presence of a Damon, but no Pythias.

Delving a bit into the past, the glamour of the White House in the good old days of carriages, wigs, top hats, hoop skirts and whatnot is brilliantly done. There are 46 George Washingtons, one of whom lives with his wife Martha in the 2400 block of Sherman avenue northwest. Other presidential names which appear one or more times are John Adams Andrew Jackson, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe Jon Q. Adams, William Henry Harrison, James Buchanan, U. S. Grant, Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt.

Right in step with the galloping of Old John Barleycorn under the New Deal, the authors have inserted numerous Beers and Wines, and by way of a sober touch, numerous Parsons.

"Interesting as the Dickens," another book reviewer remarked after examining the volume. "It's a regular Old Curiosity Shop!"

Like gargoyles chinning themselves on a ledge, the authors, toward the end, go fantastic, writing such grand old story book names as Demons, Troll, Dragons and Griffin.

$900,000 Relief Fund Sought for District

Request for approximately $900,000 to pay for direct relief and work relief in the District during May will be sent to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in a few days, the District Commissioners announced yesterday.

April allotments totaled $1,000,000. Originally $800,000 was provided, but this sum was exhausted last week and Commissioner George E. Allen was compelled to ask for an additional $200,000.

25,000 Relief Cases in D. C. Bear Scrutiny

Personnel Shakeup Due Also; 44 Clerks Dismissed.

Some Applicants Called Undeserving; Slump Arrived Late.

Criticism of the relief situation in the District Federal officials has led to a re-check of all the 25,000 cases on local relief rolls and a shakeup in personnel by the District Relief Administration, it was announced yesterday.

Meanwhile, Federal relief officials are making inquiry of their own to determine where District relief money goes.

In the face of possibilities of a reorganization of relief activities, Mrs. Pauline Shereshefsky, acting assistant supervisor for the District, said there are now more people on the rolls than there have been at any time since the beginning of the depression.

Depression Arrived Later.

District officials were inclined to minimize the impression aired at Federal Emergency Relief headquarters yesterday that many of those receiving help here do not deserve it. It was explained that, though Washington felt economic distress later than most American cities because of its comparatively nonindustrial character, the depression had "backed up" here finally and would be likely to remain longer than elsewhere, where business is picking up.

Most of the unemployed, it was pointed out, are unskilled laborers in construction industries. The amount of building going on in the District, it was said, is negligible.

Attention also was called to the fact that the local administration in the last two months has opened two new offices and undertaken the transfer of persons from CWA to EWA rolls, which required a large staff. There are 1,100 employees of the local administration who distribute relief to 25,500 people. Until recently, it was explained, the shortage of case workers made it necessary to employ a large clerical staff.

44 Clerks Are Dismissed.

There are now 260 case workers, however, it was said, who can do some of their own clerical work, with the result that 44 clerks have been dismissed this week, with other dismissals to follow. It is expected that there will be minor reductions elsewhere.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins two days ago approved a District grant of $200,000 for the last week in April, after having criticized Commissioner George E. Allen for exceeding the original grant of $800,000 for the month. The Commissioners are expected to seek between $900,000 and $1,000,000 for next month, though no request has as yet been officially made.

Auto Found in Garage Linked to Bank Holdup

Richmond, April 27 (AP).—An automobile, thought to be the car used by bandits in a $60,000 holdup of State Planters bank messengers here on March 2, was found today in a Richmond garage, a few blocks from where the holdup was staged. It contained empty pouches, two ragged lumber jackets, two caps and two bottles partially filled with liquor.

The discovery was made when Abraham Massad, owner, gave permission to a prospective renter to visit the supposedly empty garage.

Cubs Victors Over Cards, 3-2 in 11th

Cuyler, at Bat for First Time, Paves Way to Win With Hit.

Scores on Single by Hartnett; 23,000 Watch Struggle.

CHICAGO, April 27 (AP).—Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, who rested on the bench while the Cubs were running up their seven-game winning streak, and Gabby Tartnett, whose bat was of little assistance in that opening burst, came through in the eleventh inning today to break up a mound duel between Lonnie Warneke and Tex Carleton and give the Cubs a 3-to-2 victory over the Cardinals.

Cuyler left the bench at the start of the final inning to replace Tut tainbuck, who injured a foot in the tenth. He celebrated his debut by poking Carleton's first pitch to left for a single, advanced on Mahager Charley Grimm's sacrifice and waited while Bill Jurges drew an intentional pass. Hartnett, who had ben held hitless 12 consecutive times at bat, delivered in the pinch with a single to center which brought in the winhing run.

It was Warneke's third straight mound victory and, while not as impressive as the first two, in which he allowed only one hit each, it was a first-class job of hurling. He granted nine hits three of them by Buster Mills, who ran his string to seveh consecutive blows before being halted, and pitched hitless ball in the last four frames. Lonnie also refused to grant a walk in the eleven frames.

Only Game Played.

The game was the only one played in the major leagues today as rain and cold halted seven contests and there might have been an excuse for another postponement. Although the weather was clear the temperature hovered around 40 degrees and the wind chilled the "ladies' day" crowd of 23,000, including about 20,000 women guests of the home club.

The Cubs collected the first run in the second as Babe Herman singled, Stainback forced him at second and Jurges drove a long one to left which fell safe for a double when Joe Medwick misjudged it. St. Louis tied the score in the third when Pepper Martin singled and stole second; advanced to third on Jack Rothrock's single and scored as Chuck Klein made a one-hand catch of Manager Frank Frisch's drive. The Cards went ahead in the sixth when Frisch singled, took third on Medwick's base hit and raced home when Collins forced Medwick.

Klein, who collected three hits in the struggle, scored Chicago's tying run in the eighth. He opened with a single, raced to third on Babe Herman's hit and tallied when Stainback, trying to dodge a pitch, dribbled a roller to Frisch and was thrown out at first.

Virginia Ring Body To Be Named Soon

Hanes, of Norfolk, in Line for Chairmanship.

Norfolk, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Gov. George C. Peery declared here today, shortly before returning to Richmond, that he would name the personnel of the new Virginia Boxing Commission at an early date. The Governor arrived here yesterday to participate in the exercises commemorating the landing of the first settlers at Cape Henry.

The commission, recently authorized by the General Assembly, is expected to be composed of men closely associated with the sports field. Thomas Hanes, sports editor of the Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch, is being boosted for the chairmanship of the board. Ralph H. Daughton, Assembly member and father of the bill, is another possible choice for membership.

Bouts now held in Norfolk are being conducted without the aid of a commission. The formation of the body, however, is expected to pave the way for some outstanding ring features at Virginia Beach this summer.

Kingwood Muny Links Names J. Spencer Pro

Kingwood, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.). For the purpose of becoming professional at the Sunny Croft public golf links at Clarksburg, Jimmy Spencer has resigned as professional at the Preston County Country Club, effective May 1. His successor has not yet been selected.

The Sunny Croft links are newly established, being on the John Dolan farm, about 3 miles south of Clarksburg on United States Route 19.

Time for Tot Story

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, April 27.—This department is wildly perturbed about the lack of statements, public notices and manifestoes issuing from the camp of Primo Carnera in the rugged and arboreal State of Maine, where the Ogre of Sequals is paring off the load of spaghetti and sundry delicacies which it is pretty well established he took aboard his person the night before the Loughran fight in Miami and which caused the scales to leap up to an unheard-of pugilistic tonnage when he trod them at the weighing-in party.

The silence might even be construed as ominious. It looks as though they were getting ready to spring the one about Carnera rescuing the little golden-haired lassie from the treacherous lake into the middle of which she managed to fall mysteriously and without visible means of getting there. I am very sensitive to such things and I am afraid it is about due.

I do not remember the name of the prize fighter, but he was training near a lake in the mountains and was a light heavyweight, which is sufficient identification, though he no doubt had a flat nose, thick lips and an ear like those new-fangled chips they serve at cocktail parties. Well, the story broke out of the camp that young Whosis at great risk of his life had rescued the golden-haired little daughter of Farmer So-and-So who fell into the lake.

The heroic fellow plunged fearlessly into the drink, swam manfully to the spot and grasped the tot just as she was going down for the you-know-what-time. This was a very fine story and made all the papers, and the fight raised its lagging head a trifle and took a look around. Later there was a nice follow-up in which the fighter and the golden-haired tot became inseparable pals, and just before he left for the fight she kissed him for the cameras and allowed she hoped he'd win. I don't suppose he did. I forgot.

Immediately upon the heels of this successful leap onto page one there followed a perfect epidemic of rescues, everything from golden-haired tots to rich old ladies, blind beggar cats, horses that had fallen down holes and other live stock of all knids. The boys around the copy desk finally got so that the copy boy no more than stuck his head inside the door, fingering a piece of yellow or gray paper, when they would instinctively duck and holler, "Here she comes, boy, the rescue story! Hold your hats!"

I happened to be in the neighborhood of one of the original rescue stories with another golden-haired tot involved, some time later, and questioned one of the natives who had "eye-witnessed" the deed. He said, "Yas, I remember that well. It was a lucky thing that young Tessie—that's Pop's kid—come along when she did in her boat, otherwise that young feller might have been stuck in the mud yet, yessir, and that ain't no good mud to be stuck in in Bog Lake. No, sir. I heerd tell o' many a man hain't never come out.

"Ye see, this here fighter-feller took off his shoes and went out into bog pond a-reachin' for water lilies—the pond ain't over 2 feet deep nowhere so I guess he done reached one o' them boggy parts and starts to sink and lets out a holler that could be heard clear down to the silo, but before any one could git to him, Pop's gal, that's Tessie—she's 9 now—is netting for minnows in Pop's old flat-bottomed boat, so she paddles close and reaches him an oar so's he can lay holt of the boat and suck hisself out of the mud. That's a right smart kid, that Tessie, and I reckon it was a good thing she come along when she did. Eh?"

Well, anyway, if the story does come through now as it is more or less bound to do, it will not be a stranger to you and you will know what it is all about; in fact you will be a couple of days ahead of it, which is a service we always render to our clients at no additional charge. Davis to Again Put Nine In Independent Field

Davis, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.). Davis again will be represented by an independent baseball team, Lloyd Winters was reelected manager while Frank Cross will serve as business manager.

Last year Davis won the second half race of the Twilight League, composed of Pierce, Thomas Cubs, Thomas Giants, Coketon, Silverlake and Benbush. This season the locals have entered the Green Mountain eLague, which consists of the Parsons Cubs, Elkins Moose, Elkins Independents, Pierce, Harpertown, Harmon and Belington.

Davis won 25 out of 29 games in 1933 and another strong team is in prospect. The club will carry the nickname of "Merchants" as business men are furnishing the uniforms.

Louisville, Ky., April 27 (AP).—Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf Association, today announced that the American Derby will be raced at Washington Park, Chicago, June 2. The race, 1¼ miles, for 3-year-olds, is worth $25,000 added.

Augusta Cadet Nine Beats Hargrave, 6 to 1

Staunton, Va., April 27 (Spl.). Augusta Military Academy today scored its eighth straight victory by defeating Hargrave Military Academy, 6 to 1. Daugherty, on the mound for the winners, was slow to round into form but, after the second inning, settled down and granted only four scattered hits and struck out 11 batsmen.

Swink, Augusta third baseman got a single, a double and triple in four trips to bat. Clark, Augusta left fielder, drove a slashing double to right with the bases loaded in the second. Oakes, Hargrave relief pitcher, went to the mound in the sixth and only allowed one hit during the remainder of the game.

Eastern and Central Nines Forced to Idle

The crucial interhigh series game between Central and Eastern, scheduled for yesterday, was rained out. Assistant Principal John P. Collins, of Eastern, head of interhigh athletics, announced the contest will be played Monday afternoon at Eastern Stadium. The opening pitch is listed for 3:30 o'clock.

Revised Nats Primed for A's Today

Connie Mack's Surprise Team of League to Make Debut Here.

Thomas, Cain, Heroes of Last Week's Series Meet on Mound.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

THE New Deal Nats, whose fortunes have improved since they stopped trying to win games with other peoples' base hits, are confronted with a new emergency today in the form of the Philadelphia Athletics, who are in town bent on no good.

These Athletics, who were supposed to be push-overs this season in the American League race because they didn't have any big league pitchers, are fresh from a three-game series with the Yankees, in which they held the New York club to 6 runs and 16 hits, which is gilt-edged pitching in any circuit and is causing thec ritics to regret their haste in consigning the Athletics to the second division.

They are the samec lub that knocked the Nats loose from two of three ball games up in Philadelphia last week-end, but Joe Cronin is now presenting for their disapproval a new arrangement of his Nats calculated to cure the anaemic hitting of the first week of the pennant race.

Reserves Spur Hitting.

Cronin prescribed a nice pick-me-up for the Nats' batting attack when he injected Bob Boken, Cecil Travis and Dave Harris into the line-up on Thursday when results were immediate and gratifying as is attested by the 16-hit barrage against four Boston pitchers. All down the line the Nats' batting order snapped out of it's lethargy.

As long as his New Dealers keep winning, Cronin will keep his regular infielders, Myer and Bluege, on the bench, but against the Athletics, Dave Harris forfeits his right field job to the left-handed hitting Johnny Stone. Compared to Harris' healthy batting average against southpaws, his hitting against right-handers is something else again and with the A's boasting no left-handed pitching of any description, Harris will warm the bench.

Al Thomas Primed.

Dusted off and polished for today's effort, Cronin has ready Al Thomas, the pitcher who led the Nats out of the wilderness of defeat up in Philadelphia last Sunday after the team had lost four straight. Thomas was the first and is the last Washington pitcher to work nine full innings and as contrased o his 1933 form, when he was piching chiefly under sufferance, he now bulks large in the Nats' pitching program.

Connie Mack, who never reveals his pitching selections until game time, to discourage the gamblers, is expected to introduce his 1934 edition of the Athletics to Washington fans with Merrritt (Sugar) Cain pitching, wherein he will be playing all the percentages, inasmuch as Cain rendered the Nats quite helpless up in Philadelphia.

Washington fans will be glimpsing, too, for the first time this season, Jimmy Foxx, the apple-cheeked southern Maryland ploughboy who has usurped Babe Ruth's home run throne and who will be dealt with today with great care by the Nats' pitchers.

Minimizes Nats.

Foxx did nothing to increase his popularity with the Nats yesterday when in a statement to the Associated Press he announced the doom of Cronin's club as champions on the basis of a weak pitching staff and lack of the fire and dash that characterized the club last year. Washington will be lucky to finish in the first division5, was his parting shot.

On review, too, will be Frankie Hayes, the 19-year-old catcher who is filling the over-sized shoes of Mickey Cochrane quite acecptably with his zestful backstopping and lively pounding of the ball. A $-a-day batting practice catcher in the South, Hayes showed such rapid improvement that Charley Berry, obtained in a trade with the White Sox during the winter, has not been able to break into the line-up.

The two clubs were rained out yesterday.

Mrs. Elting Heads Golf Women at Winchester

Winchester, Va, April 27 (Spl.).—Mrs. Stewart O. Elting has been chosen head of the ladies' golf activities committee of the Winchester Golf Club, which will schedule matches with similar teams of nearby clubs this season. Other members of the committee include Mrs. B. B. Dutton, Mrs. J. Victor Arthur, Miss Mary Miller and Miss Virginia Boyd.

Clubs with which matches have been arranged include Millwood, Purcelville, Frederick, Md.; Chambersburg, Pa., and Waynesboro, Pa. Ladies' day will be observed at the club each Wednesday.

Three Decline D. C. Boxing Posts

Spaid, Leonard, Baker Refuse to Serve on New Commission.

WITH practically everyone in Washington who has ever seen a prizefight bidding for the two berths remaining on the boxing commission, which must be appointed before legalization of the sport becomes operative here, three men who had made no effort to secure appointments were approached by the District Commissioners yesterday and declined appointments on the regulatory body.

W. A. Spaid, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., a close personal friend of District Commissioner Allen, was the first to decline to serve on the boxing commission. In rapid succession the berths were offered to Maj. Henry Leonard, a retired Marine aid at the White House, and Raymond Baker, former Director of the Mint, who also refused appointment.

Has No One in Mind.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who tendered the appointments, said yesterday he had no one in mind to serve with Major Ernest W. Brown, but stated that no one intimately associated with the boxing game would receive consideration.

Refusal of the three men to whom commissionerships were tendered yesterday to serve on the three-man body has thrown the situation into the chaos that prevailed when the bill was first passed. In the wide-open race that is now going on, it is generally believed that one or more of the numerous applicants will be offered appointments.

In the list of those who have applied for the commissionerships are many whose association with boxing has been purely abstract, but who are well qualified in every respect to serve on the regulatory group. The District Commissioners were unable yesterday to say when they would be able to announce the complete personnel of the commission.

Pitt Annexes Belle Haven Feature

Comedalist Is Winner on 21st Hole Over Greene, Argyle.

Harvey Beaten by 1 Up to Thompson; Shorey Also Advances.

IN THE most exciting battle of the first round of match play in the Belle Haven Country Club invitation golf tournament yesterday, Harry G. Pitt, co-sharer of the medal prize with J. W. Harvey, jr., had to travel 21 holes before eliminating Hickman Greene, of Argyle, former Louisiana State University golf captain.

While Pitt was having the struggle of his life blasting out the diminutive Dixie star, playing in his first big tournament in this section, the lean and lanky Harvey was tasting a 1-up defeat at the hands of the bespectacled veteran from Beaver Dam, Forest Thompson.

Meanwhile other favorites were pressed to the limit. Roger Peacock, Maryland State amateur champion, was carried to the home green by Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, and triumphed by 1 up. After a ragged qualifying round, Peacock came to life yesterday and shot a 76. He had to shoot this low because Drain was hot on his heels, rifling pars and birdies with monotonous regularity on the incoming side. After being all square at the 14th, Peacock won the 17th to go 1 up, and they halved the home hole in 4s.

John Shorey Wins.

John Shorey, of Manor, put out the home club star, Sidney Sharwood, 2 up, in a hotly contested match. Arthur Urban, of Indian Spring, eliminated Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, 2 and 1 in a mild upset. Craig McKee, of Indian Spring, won from E. J. Carver, of Manor, 3 and 2. Ralph Fowler, of Washington, whipped Ted Rutley, of Beaver Dam, 2 and 1, and R. H. O'Malley, Georgetown University entry, toppled C. S. Runswick, of Indian Spring, 2 up.

Two matches are scheduled today. Thompson is slated to meet O'Malley at 10:40; Shorey will oppose Urban at 10:45; McKee and Peacock will clash at 10:50, and Pitt faces Fowler at 10:55. The finals will be played Sunday afternoon, and the playoff for the medal between Pitt and Harvey is scheduled for Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

The cold and high wind again put a dent into the scoring hopes of the contestants. Peacock's 76 was the lowest reported.

Greene's Stand Surprise.

Greene's stand against Pitt came as a surprise. The Southerner, 2 down at the fourth, evened the match at the ninth and plodded along in even-Stephen fashion with the Manor Moose. Greene won the seventeenth to go 1 up. On the deceptive eighteenth, that has gobgled up the hopes of many of the star golfers, Greene hooked his tee shot out of bounds and lost the hole with a 5 to Pitt's 4. Pitt made a great recovery on the nineteenth. After Greene reached the green in three, Pitt, shooting from havy grass to the carpet guarded by a trip, failed to carry the trap. Harry made a spectacular niblick out to within 6 feet of the pin, and halved the hole with a 5. They halved the twentieth in 5s, and on the twenty-first Pitt reeled off a long drive and a beautiful approach that finished some 15 feet from the pin. Greene, short with his second, conceded the hole after his try from 15 feet failed.

Championship Flight.

Forest Thompson (Beaver Dam) defeated J. W. Harvey, jr. (Manor), 1 up; R. H. O'Malley (Georgetown University) defeated C. S. Old Liners List Three Events Today

Meet N. P. I. Nine, Yale at Lacrosse and Virginia in Net Match.

MARYLOND athletes occupy the top spot on today's collegiate sports program, with three events scheduled at College Park. Old Line teams play Virginia Poly in baseball, starting at 1:30 o'clock—Yale in lacrosse at 3:30 o'clock and Virginia in tennis. The 880-yard relay team also will run in the Penn Relays at Philadelphia.

Georgetown's 880-yard quartet also is to represent the District in the Relays, while the Hoya diamond squad tackles Navy at Annapolis. George Washington's tennis team is the only other local contingent scheduled. It is to engage Johns Hopkins at Baltimore.

Today will find Earl Widmyer, Terp sprint ace, and Wilmer Bradley, Georgetown's most capable dash man, running against a crack field in the 100 meters, feature event on the elaborate Penn Relay card. Maryland's 440-yard relay team, with Widmyer running anchor, managed to land fourth place in the finals, but Georgetown was eliminated in the trial heats.

Maryland's baseball and lacrosse teams rule favorites over their rivals today. Yale sprang a big upset several years ago, whipping the highly touted Terps, 5-3, at New Haven. Since then the two have not met. The baseball team is getting by all opponents, with the exception of Richmond U., and should get by V. P. I. with little trouble.

The Navy-Georgetown game is a toss-up.

Danville Signs Hendrix.

Danville, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Luke Hendrix, catcher for the House of David baseball team, has been signed by Herb Brett, manager of the Danville team, in the Bi-State loop.

Tech's Team Second in Thriller

Virginia Ace Runs Over Muddy Track to Win in 0:15.8.

District Four's Belated Spurt Futile; Army Defeats Navy.

FRANKLIN FIELD, Philadelphia, Pa., April 27.—A steady downpour of rain, which refused to let up by any degrees until the sun finally peeped out of the clouds in late afternoon, here this afternoon, as 1,500 spectators turned out to watch that number of ambitious runners bearing the standards of secondary schools and colleges throughout the East, Middle West and South in the fortieth relay carnival held under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania. The inclement weather, however, is quite traditional with the games. Last year was the first time in ever-so-many years that a good fast track was offered to the entrants.

But mud held no fears for Grover Everett, Virginia's high stepper, a Washington, D. C., boy, who brought a major title to the land South of the Mason-Dixon Line, when he vanquished a star-studded field to annex top honors in the 110-meter high hurdles. Everett gained the crown by finishing ahead of John Fatseas, of New York University; D. A. Wrigley, of Navy, and P. Good, of Bodwdoin. He was clocked in the commendable time of 15.8 seconds.

Everett Works Smoothly.

Everett flew over a row of ten hurdles with a certain precision and smoothness that was not to be denied where championships were concerned. His only threat lay in the stocky form of New York's Fatseas, who is one of the fleetest hurdlers competing in college ranks today.

Fatseas seemed to make up lost ground almost simultaneously as they came to the last hurdle. But here Everett's finesse came to the fore. Whereas the Southerner shaved the final obstacle with meticulous care, Fatseas kicked over the last hurdle and barely held out for second position.

In the preliminary heats, Everett won in 0:15.8, Wrigley took second to D. Cademyer, of Indiana, in the slow time of 0:16.1, while Pilcher, of Navy, triumphed in 0:16.1 to gain the semifinals. The Virginia-Navy pair moved into the finals as Everett won his semifinal heat in 0:16 over P. Good, of Bowdoin; D. Cook, of Ohio State; W. S. Merwin, of Cornell, and T. J. Smithies, of Princeton, while Wrigley pulled up second to John Fatseas in 0:16. Pilcher finished fourth, behind Cademeyer, and din't qualify for the finals.

Staging a belated spurt, the McKinley High School quartet of sprinters annexed second place in the interscholastic one-quarter mile relay race for the championship of America. The Capital City boys had copped first place in the opening heat of this event, covering the double furlong in 0:45.4.

Tech Relay Second.

In the finals the McKinley delegation faced the starter's gun along with Mercersburg Academy, Altoona High and Hill School. Mercersburg broke fast, jumped into the lead and gained the pole position. Altoona was second, followed by Hill and McKinley, in that order. As the runners passed the second and third legs, coming down the home stretch, C. Bogan had moved up into third and in that position passed the baton to H. Pearson, anchor man, 7 yards behind J. White, Mercersburg's last runner, and 4 yards in the rear of J. Ward, Altoona's representative.

With only a bit more than 100 yards remaining before the finish of the race, the three runners in advance bore down with fervent power into the muddy track which once, undoubtedly, boasted cinders. With 50 yards to go, Pearson drew up alongside Ward, a yard or two further and the McKinley lad was in second place, at the same time cutting down the distance between himself and White.

Still Pearson came, full speed ahead, as White appeared to tire,

Bright Haven Scores an Easy Victory in Sprint Feature at Havre de Grace

Sage Stable's Star Beats Happy Go

Wins by Four Lengths, Running Over Soft Track in 1:14 3-5.

By Walter Haight,
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

HAVRE DE GRACE Race Track, April 27.—Bright Haven, whose pappa, Bright Knight, and mama, Rock Haven, preferred soft race track, scored a smashing victory here today in the Greenwich Purse, outstanding contest on the program of the Harford Count Agriculture Association, Inc., which is staging turf productions hereabouts. With the rather unfashionable Jockey J. Battista, in the saddle, Bright Haven romped home four lengths in advance of the favored Happy Go with the highly-touted The Immortal 2d third.

The Sage Stable sent a fit colt to the post and his superiority over the field was such that Battista had only to stay in the saddle. He rane the six furlongs in 1:14 3-5, creditable time under the conditions and he was mightly popular among the two-dollar betters.

The early morning brought rain which softened the track and resulted in numerous scratches. The card was marked by several thrilling finishes, in which many of the crowd did not agree with the placing judges.

Golden Dream Scores.

The opening dash of 4½ furlongs for juveniles saw 11 matching strides over the abbreviated distance. There was a mild surprise with the running when Golden Dream, coupled with Kindred Spirit as the Middleburg-Ziegler, jr., entry, registered brackets in a thrilling finish. Making the pace from the start of the short sprint, Golden Dream, under the handling of E. Litzenberger, led Back Fence over the line to score by a neck. The winner sped over the sloppy course in 0:54 3-5 and her backers took down a mutuel dividend of $9.40.

Another field of 11 competed in the second. In a sinew-straining finish, Sequoia, from th J. E. Smallman Stable, led for the duration of the journey to register a nose verdict over Pass, from the Carreaud Barn. Third was landed by Sorcery when he easily outfinished Peedeeque and the seven others. Paying $6.70, the victor raced over the three-quarter distance in 1:14 2-5.

A double was credited to the J. E. Smallman stable and Jockey Earl Porter was astride both winners when he had Quickly home in advance of four other sprinters to account for the six furlongs of the third race. Following the finish Jockey J. Bethel lodged a claim of foul against the winner, which was not allowed.

Chips Takes Fifth.

J. P. Jones furnished the winner for the first of the long-distance numbers when he sent Chips postward for the mile and seventy yards of the fifth number in contention with seven other three-year-olds of ordinary class. Favored in the speculation, Chips earned his second success of the meeting and incidentally added another score to the list of winning favorites, and the followers of Jockey R. Merritt rejoiced when the lad took the lead in the argument for leadership among the riders for a gold stop watch offered by the local management. Going to the front directly after the start, Chips led for the remainder of the journey to defeat Come Seven by a wide margin, while Lauretta Nash took third. Chips paid $5.50.

C. P. Lindner's Lone Hand achieved success in an upset when he was awarded a nose decision in the sixth, a 9-furlong contest. There were many in the crowd that disagreed with the official placing, believing that Spanish had gotten up in the last couple of strides. At the finish these two were out a length in advance of the stoutly backed Sam Shadow, with Lacquer before the three others. Lone Hand paid his admirers $21.80.

Politen, at $6.70, won the seventh. Southard was second, with Ali Rowes taking third.

Van Ryn Defeats Stoefen in Upset

Hot Springs, Va., April 27 (AP).—Favorites fell before the onslaughts of lesser ranking stars in many of today's semifinal matches in the Virginia State Tennis Tournament.

The day's biggest reversal of dope came in the men's singles semifinals, when John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, ranking twelfth among the Nation's stars, eliminated Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles, ranking No. 3, 10—8, 9—11, 6—0, 6—4.

A second major upset game in the other men's singles semifinal event, when Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., National ranking No. 2, eliminated Frank Shields, of New York, ranking No. 1, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2, 4—6, 6—1.

Collateral in Speedy Workout for Derby

New York, April 27 (U.P.).—Only two Kentucky Derby candidates were exercised over Metropolitan tracks today. At Belmont Park, C. V. Whitney's Collateral dashed a handy mile in 0:49 3-5, and at Aqueduct, H. C. Phipps' Changeling was sent 3 furlongs, which he covered easily in 0:39 1-5.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Havre de Grace, April 28.

Derby and Preakness candidates will get the acid test here tomorrow and you can expect several scratches from those classics after the $7,500 added Chesapeake is history. Should the track be fast, there is little doubt but what a new time for the course will be recorded. Cavalcade equaled the mark for virtually the same rout in his last outing and Discovery broke the record in a trial. Soon Over, Singing Wood, Time Clock and others have turned in sensational workouts. Although he is not mentioned below, Clocker Mike has picked Agrarian. Perhaps he's jealous because Mrs. Bennings' lovely youth had three winners today. We shall see what we shall see.

BILL.

First race—Ladino is not so heavily opposed in this sprint, and a slightly off track should find the former Ral Parr star romping to a set of brackets. Indiantown won over cheap ones and then stepped up over his head. He's dangerous among these. Water Set for the show. Quickly won today and will hardly be sent back. Keen factor if she runs.

Second race—Golden Fate comes to this test recommended by fast trials and ready to run a hard race, according to Clocker Mike. Silk Flag turned in a neat effort in the mud and could be mighty close in this field. Stroll Along may be the sleeper.

Third race — Lady Sable has shown a punch in those last two races and, although she meets better company here, I'm stringing along. Evangelist won his last impressively and is the one to beat. Whoa Back for the show end.

Fourth race—Gay World is a fit horse as his stake win at Bowie revealed. At the weights I don't believe he will meet defeat. Silent Shot is a bear in the mud and is dangerous. Monel has speed and will be near the top as far as she goes.

Fifth race—Cavalcade broke the track record without being extended last out and, despite the presence of some truly great 3-year-olds, I'm placing my dependence in the Brookmeade racer. Discovery's sensational workout makes him a factor. Time Supply to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Catwalk has shown me enough to warrant a top selection in this group. Gallic and Pencader to account for the place and show awards.

Seventh race—Peedeeque sprinted today and was gaining at the end. Meets only a fair field here and may score that long-awaited victory. Appomattox and Black Song to complete the money picture.

Winchester Baseball.

Winchester, Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Two games will be played by the Winchester Park Association nine here this coming week-end. Saturday afternoon the Loudoun Light & Power Co., of Purcellville, will furnish the opposition. Sunday afternoon the Millwood (Va.) Athletic Club will be seen in action against the locals.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN DREAM, $9.40, $4.50, $3.10; BACK FENCE, $3.90, $2.80; BARCAROLLE, $4.80.

GOLDEN DREAM began quickly, displayed good speed while maintaining a short lead, and held on in determined fashion when nearing the finish. BACK FENCE, forced to race on the outside of the leaders from the beginning, drew on almost even terms with the winner, but hung during the closing furlong. BARCAROLLE was tired ridden from the start. He weakened under punishment in the closing furlong. RUSTIC JOE was unable to better his position in the early stages. EXHIBIT had speed for the first half-mile, then tired. TRULY YOURS was outrun. OUTSIDE broke slowly, and then raced very wide and green.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:07. Winner, J. E. Smallman's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEQUOIA, $6.70, $3.80, $2.80; PASS, $5.80, $3.60; SORCERY, $3.70.

SEQUOIA, hard hustled to take command, shook off BONNIE DHU when leaving the back stretch, withstood a stout drive gamely thereafter, and just lasted to stall off PASS. Latter broke slowly, was rushed up into contention on the inside until entering the winner, came to the outside, and was nearing the winner down gradually. SORCERY, slow to get going, circled his field and finished gamely. PEEDEEQUE closed a good gap from a slow beginning. JUST CAP raced well in spots. HACKY H. was bearing out in the last half-mile and finished very wide. BONNIE DHU had early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800: claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:39. Winner, E. Smallman's blk. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUICKLY, $8.70, $5 30, $3 50; CRAZY JANE, $5.70, $5.30; MR. HYDE, $4.00.

QUICKLY, away fast, and displaying good speed, was given a mild breathing spell when CRAZY JANE was rushed to the front, responded stoutly when shaken up, and retained command in the closing sixteenth. CRAZY JANE, taken up repeatedly in the opening furlong, went to the outside to assume command, but weakened after saving ground. J. Bethel made a claim of foul against the winner, which was not allowed. MR. HYDE raced strongly from the beginning, and then continued stoutly after losing ground entering the home stretch. BLACK TARGET, squeezed back at the start, moved up fast when straightened into the home stretch, and then finished in very fifth quarters at the end. MARGE was always outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Greenwich. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:09. Off at 4:11. Winner, Sage Stable's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT HAVEN, $6.10, $2.90, $2.50; HAPPY GO, $2.60, $2.20; THE IMMORTAL II., $2.70.

BRIGHT HAVEN, rated close to KHAMSEEN in the first half-mile, took command under strong urging at the stretch turn, and saving much ground thereafter, drew out nicely approaching the finish. HAPPY GO, forced to race on the outside from the beginning, closed gamely during the stretch run. THE IMMORTAL II raced steadily from the beginning. He met with interference during the closing furlong when in between KHAMSEEN and HAPPY GO. KHAMSEEN displayed high early speed. He weakened and may have been short. BIOGRAPHY closed stoutly from a slow beginning. GOLDEN VEIN raced as if overmatched.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won cleverly; place, driving. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:40½. Winner, J. P. Jones's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIPS, $5.50, $3.40, $2.80; COME SEVEN, $4.50, $3.20; LAURETTA NASH, $3.40.

CHIPS outran his field to the first turn, was steadied along under light pressure while resisting COME SEVEN, and then came out smartly when shaken up during the stretch drive. COME SEVEN moved up menacingly when nearing the final turn, made repeated efforts, but was not good enough. LAURETTA NASH went prominently under pressure and held the others safe. BARKANTINE was unable to better his position in the last five furlongs. MASKED JESTER was done early. COUSIN GEORGE was never a factor. NITTEN NANCY was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800: claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:10½. Winner, C. P. Lindener's ch. g. (4), by Single Foot—Enchantment. Trained by A. L. Briggs. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:42 2-5, 1:56.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONE HAND, $21.80, $8.60, $4.70; SPANISH, $7.30, $3.30; SUN SHADOW, $2.50.

LONE HAND, rated within striking distance of the leaders, secured racing room on the inside when entering the home stretch, finished resolutely, and was up in the final strides. SPANISH, slow to get going, circled his field in the last half-mile, and closed with a belated rush while finishing wide. SUN SHADOW followed in nearest pursuit of IN INDIA, came through on the inside of the pacemaker to gain a brief lead, but faltered approaching the finish. LACQUER moved up strongly midway of the home stretch, met with interference and could not recover quickly enough to hold a prominent position. IN INDIA, steadied in front, weakened under punishment in the final drive. HIGH SOCKS and MODERN TIMES were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800: claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:40½. Winner, G. C. Brenton's dk. b. g. (7), by Politan—Polyxena. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:41 4-5, 1:56.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POLITEN, $6.70, $3.60, $2.50; SOUTHARD, $4.10, $2.60; ALL ROWES, $2.30.

POLITEN, taken under slight restraint when in command, saved ground while resisting early contention, was shaken up at the stretch turn, and came out stoutly to win the final drive. SOUTHARD, hurried into contention, and a keen factor throughout, held on well in the final test. ALL ROWES, badly handled, and messed about in the first seven furlongs, weakened under punishment in the last quarter-mile. KING BIRD could not better his position at any stage. He finished in tight quarters nearing the finish while on the inside. WANDREL and ROCK COVENTRY were held safe.

Virginia Blanks Wash. & Lee Nine, 2-0

Rogers Holds Generals to Three Hits, Fans Nine and Walks One.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 27.—With Orlin Rogers, crack southpaw, on the mound, Virginia's nine blanked Washington and Lee here today, 2-0, to take the lead among the Big Four teams of the State.

The contest, played on a wind-swept diamond, was a rare pitchers' duel. Rogers held the Generals to one hit up to the ninth, and had nine strikeouts to his credit. He issued but a single pass.

Joe Pette, in the box for the Generals, weakened momentarily in the fifth, and Virginia pushed over one run. After Poindexter had singled to left field, the big right-hander walked Brewer, Drissell and Carter in succession, forcing in Poindexter.

Walk Becomes Run.

The other Cavalier tally came in the seventh. Brewer drew a pass, promptly stole second, went to third on Drissell's infield hit, and scored while Field was trying to catch Drissell between first and second.

The Generals threatened in the ninth. With one out, Field poked a single to center and raced to third on Mattox's screeching hit to right field. Rogers then settled down and fanned Miller and Pette.

The fielding feature was a sensational catch in deep center of Pullen's long fly by Drissell, who took the ball over his head on the run.

G. U. Nine Plays At Annapolis Today

Game, Crew Races With Columbia to Feature Big Navy Program.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 27 (Spl.).—Rowing races with crews of Columbia University, of New York; the annual baseball game with Georgetown, and lacrosse with Mount Washington Club, will be the high spots of the week-end athletic card at the Naval Academy.

The Columbia bladesmen, comprising varsity, junior varsity and 150-pound eight-oared crews, who arrived last night, engaged in workouts both morning and

Stocks Yield One-Tenth in Dull Trading

Most Issues Change Little as Sales Decline to 853,480 Shares.

New York, April 27 (AP).—Dullness ruled the stock market today and few issues ventured out of a narrow fractional range.

Business was light, transactions reaching a total of only 853,480 shares. A handful of oil issues acquired a little momentum during the last hour and rail shares seemed mildly interested both in recent traffic statistics and the good March earnings statements, though that group was hardly better than steady.

Over the entire market, advances slightly outnumbered declines and the closing composite appreciated one-tenth of a point net.

On Rising List.

Snider Packing, United States Rubber preferred, McLellan Stores, Evans Products, American Bank Note, American Smelting, United States Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine and Chesapeake & Ohio rose fractions to a couple of points in varying degrees of activity. American Telephone, Pennsylvania, General Electric, United States Steel, General Motors, Chrysler and North American finished unchanged or nearly so.

Consolidated Gas yielded a fraction. Standard Oil of California had an extreme rise of two points, and Tidewater did equally well.

The upturn of commodities, especially wheat, silver and cotton, was a pleasant relief from recent weakness, even though it did not arouse speculative enthusiasm for stocks; share traders may have wanted more definite evidence that the latest spasm of liquidation had ended. Bonds also marked time.

Freight Traffic Gains.

Freight traffic last week had a larger gain than expectable under seasonal precedent; fuel, ore and live stock provided most of the lift over the prevous week.

Major carriers are showing good gains, with few exceptions, though this does not mean that all were able to cover fixed charges in this month.

Dun & Bradstreet spoke of "the auspicious start" which the second quarter has made, and also mentioned the appearance of uncertainty here and there in industry "as manufacturers attempted to make adjustments to the new set-up of increased wages and shorter hours of work, which have caused an upward revision of selling prices."

Some estimates place automobile sales lower, giving rise to conjectures as to whether the spring top has been reached in demand for motor cars. Undoubtedly, expectation of higher prices brought considerable business to dealers' order books a few weeks ago.

Discussion This Week Has Gone Far to Clarify the Conditions Under Which Gold Will Be Permitted to Be Exported.

By Ralph West Robey.

Out of the fact that a week ago French francs reached the gold export point has come some clarification of the conditions under which a license will be given to export the metal from this country. No official statements have been issued, but as a result of inquiries and rather widespread discussion at least some of the broader questions have been answered. The subject is important because the final test of whether a country is on a gold standard rests upon the conditions surrounding the convertibility of its paper money into gold and the ability to get the metal for export.

On January 31 when the dollar was devalued it was stated officially that gold would be made available for export if necessary in order to keep the price of our currency stable in the foreign exchange market. It was this, and this alone, which justified the description of our new monetary program as a modernized gold standard. Because the foreign exchange rate consistently stayed below the gold export point throughout February, March and up until last Saturday, however, there was no opportunity to test this rather casual assurance by the Treasury that gold would be made available for export.

No Applications for A License Were Made.

Saturday morning, as a result largely of a speculative play, French francs rose to 6.6975. At this price it would have been profitable to ship metal. The foreign exchange market was so thin, nevertheless, that there was no incentive to make such a transfer. In consequence, no applications for a license to export metal were made to the Federal Reserve Bank. Sufficient interest was aroused, however, to cause inquiries and it is upon the basis of the answers to these that the conclusions have been reached as to the conditions which must be fulfilled before a license will be granted.

First of these conditions is that such a transfer of gold must be the cheapest available means for making payment. This means that the rate must be above the gold export point. Until this level is reached no licenses will be considered.

Second is the provision that the gold must be shipped to a central bank or its equivalent. The reason for this appears to be merely to keep the metal under better control and remove the risk of price fluctuations.

Third and most important is the specification that gold can be shipped only to those countries which buy and sell gold through their central bank or other agent at fixed prices. This, of course, eliminates England and all other countries that do not maintain a statutory value for gold through a standing offer to buy and sell unlimited amounts.

Our Monetary System Does Not Fit Requirements.

The interesting part of this third limitation from our point of view is the reflection it casts upon our own monetary system. In this country there is no obligation to buy and sell gold at fixed prices. On the contrary, the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, "may purchase gold . . . at such rates and upon such terms and conditions as he may deem most advantageous to the public interest." In the opinion of experts, this means that the price at which the Secretary of the Treasury buys gold may be varied without any further changes in the gold content of the dollar.

Obviously, therefore, were any other country to adopt exactly the same monetary program that we have today it would not be eligible as a recipient for any of our gold regardless of what its exchange rate might be. In other words, "a 1934 model gold bullion standard with knee action, airflow and streamline" is not in the official view, a gold standard.

Morgantown Bank Gets Authority for Reopening

Charleston, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.). W. C. Given, State banking commissioner, has authorized the Bank of Morgantown at Morgantown to resume business on an unrestricted business. The bank has deposits of $1,600,000 and assets of $2,000,000.

The banking commissioner has also authorized the payment of a ten per cent dividend to depositors of the closed Richwood Banking & Trust Co. at Richwood and of the closed Bank of Williamsburg at Williamsburg. Approximately $55,000 will be thus distributed.

Bank Clearings Increase.

New York, April 27 (AP).—Bank clearings in the Nation's principal cities during the week ended April 25 totaled $4,907,309,000, an increase of 28.2 per cent over the $3,877,358,000 cleared in the same week last year, Dun & Bradstreet announced.

Bonds Decline Fraction in Lighter Sales

Several Issues Record Gains; Trading Cut to $11,732,000.

New York, April 27 (AP).—The bond market drifted irregularly lower today, but the trading volume dwindled sharply as interest lapsed into lethargy.

Transfers totaled only $11,732,000, par value, against $14,357,000 yesterday. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues showed a decline of one-tenth of a point at 87.6.

The day's news was rather colorless, so far as the senior loans market was concerned, and traders in the secondary categories were inclined to take profits. The rails were a bit heavy notwithstanding the contra-seasonal gain in freight carloadings which was due principally to miscellaneous shipments.

Gainers in Dull Session.

There were a few outstanding gainers in the dull session. Among these were Botany Mills Consolidated 6s, up 3⅜ points; Central of Georgia 5½s, up 2½; General Theater 6s, up 1¾ and Rio Grande Western First 4s, up 2¾.

Some issues of Santa Fe, Alleghany Corp., Chesapeake Corp., Chesapeake & Ohio, Great Northern, Pennsylvania and Union Pacific were up moderately.

The more active carriers losers of fractions to a point or more included liens of Southern, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Erie, St. Paul, Central of Georgia and Baltimore & Ohio.

Utilities and Industrials.

Among the better utilities and industrials were bonds of General Theaters, International Cement, International Paper, Metropolitan Edison, Nassau Electric, Warner Bros. and Western Union. Issues of utilities, power and light, U. S. Rubber, Studebaker, Sharon Steel Hoop, Shell Union Oil, Inland Steel, American Writing Paper, Columbia Gas and American & Foreign Power sagged.

U. S. Government securities were fairly active, with a turnover amounting to some $2,200,000 against about $1,000,000 in the previous session, but minor gains and losses were about evenly divided at the close.

German government 5½s and 7s rallied a point or more on further indications from Berlin that the debt conference there may succeed in having the interest payments maintained on these loans. Bonds of Buenos Aires and Colombia recovered 2 points or so. Loans of Argentina, Australia and Finland were heavy.

Curb Trading Is Indifferent; Mines Firm

Utilities, Oils, Industrials Change Fractionally; Sales, 199,000 Shares.

New York, April 27 (AP)—Gold mining shares were firm in an otherwise indifferent curb market today. Fluctuations among prominent utilites, oils and industrials were generally fractional. Alcohols were a shade easier.

Dealings were slow from the initial transactions. Transfers which approximated 199,000 shares were about one third less than the previous day.

Hollinger, Lake Shore and Pioneer gold finished about a point higher each. Wright Hargreaves gained a fraction. Duvan-Texas Sulphur, Charis Corporation and International Petroleum represented scattered firm spots.

Hiram Walker was off slightly. Swift & Co., American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share and Standard Oil of Indiana closed practically unchanged.

Washington Business Angles

By J. R. Brackett.

(Associated Press.)

Leon Henderson, chief of NRA's Research and Planning Division, finds an unusual sign of business recovery in the desire of many corporations to increase their business volume by reducing prices.

This does not mean cutting, Henderson said in an interview, but rather the National reduction of prices as costs are lowered through increased production.

The development probably will be accelerated as present control methods in many codes are changed so that prices may fluctuate more freely, in accordance with often expresed wishes of Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator.

Henderson said he believed many of the restrictive provisions in codes, sometimes characterized as productive of regimentation, were put in because business groups asked for them, and that the same business groups were now asking the elimination or major alteration of such provisions.

Johnson said at a recent press conference that it seemed likely open price associations would be permitted under NRA, but that the waiting period, under which prices announced by members of industry do not become effective for several days, would be eliminated.

Johnson's idea of open prices has been compared to the stock market, where there is a published price for every transaction at the time of sale. When prices are so published there is no opportunity to bring prices into line among competitors, as, critics claim, has been done under the waiting period.

Henderson believes flexibility of prices is essential to efficient operation of the present economic system. His position against control methods which tend to make prices uniform has been stated several times.

Destructive price cutting still is banned by NRA under special regulations permitting price fixing in emergencies.

British Iron, Steel Output Increases

British production of iron and steel reached notably high levels during the month of March, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner James Somerville, jr., London.

According to figures issued by the National Federation of Iron and Steel Manufacturers, British output of pig iron during that month amounted to 503,000 tons, a figure 52 per cent above the March, 1933, total, and 48 per cent above the 1933 monthly average. The March total compares with monthly averages for 1931 and 1932 of 314,400 and 297,800 tons, respectively.

British production of steel ingots and castings in March amounted to 829,000 tons, 44 per cent above the March, 1933, output, and 43 per cent compared with the 1933 monthly average and compares with monthly averages in 1931 and 1932 of only 433,500 and 438,500 tons.

Goods Markets.

New York, April 27 (A.P.).—Print cloths eased further today in a quiet market. Bids of 6¼ cents for 38½-inch 64x60s were declined, but some mills were willing to consider 6⅛ cents. Others held for 6½. Rayon woven fabrics are in better demand and yarns are steadier outside of knitting qualities. Woolens for suitings are in demand and worsteds quiet. The silk industry is considering plans for curtailment of production. Burlaps held steady for spot delivery and trading is quiet.

New York, April 27 (A.P.).—Dried fruits steady, unchanged.

Belgian Congo Output Of Tin Climbs Sharply

Production of tin in the Belgian Congo registered a sharp increase during 1933, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Acting Commercial Attache Leigh W. Hunt, Brussels.

Total output in that year amounted to 2,389 tons compared with 974 tons in 1932 and 290 tons in 1931. During 1929, it is pointed out, tin production in the Congo amounted to approximately 1,500 tons but began to markedly decline at the beginning of the world depression. The 1934 production, Hunt states, is expected to show a further important increase.

Poland Signs Contract for U. S. Rail Brakes

Seaboard Oil Corporation of Delaware reports March quarter net profit of $368,219, equal to 29 cents a share, against $290,809, or 24 cents a share a year ago.

Tide Water Associated Oil Co. reports for the March quarter consolidated net profit of $1,430,962, equivalent after dividend requirements on the 6 per cent preferred stock to 8 cents a share on the common. In the same quarter last year the company had a net loss of $1,238,728.

Air Reduction Co. reports March quarter net profit of $994,284, equal to $1.21 a share, compared with $379,437, or 45 cents a share in the 1933 period.

American Water Works & Electric Co. had net income of $3,655,-311 in the year ended March 31, equal after preferred dividends to $1.40 a common share, against $2,-962,622, or $1,02 a share for the year ended March 31, 1933.

Wheeling Steel Corporation had net loss in the first quarter of $58,-333, compared with loss of $802,-419 in the same quarter last year.

Bristol Myers Co. reports first-quarter profit of $669,213 after charges, equal to 95 cents a share, compared with $598,722, or 85 cents a share in the first quarter of 1933.

Net sales of the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co. for the first quarter was $5,618,376, according to Paul W. Seiler, president, who stated that after depreciation and other charges, net profit in the quarter amounted to approximately $7,315. In the first quarter of 1933 the company reported net loss of $1,067,981.

Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. declared a dividend of 25 cents, payable May 31 to stock of record April 30, six months ago the company paid 20 cents.

Fisk Rubber Corporation, formed last year as successor to Fisk Rubber Co., reports first quarter net profit of $120,287. In a separate statement covering export accounts in liquidation a loss of $1,031 is reported for the period.

Directors of Bigelow Sanford Carpet Co., today declared a dividend of $2 on the preferred stock for the four months ended May 31, payable June 30 to stock of record May 10. This represents the quarterly dividend of $1.50 and 50 cents for the fourth month.

American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. had first quarter net profit of $87,020, against net loss of $24,089 in the corresponding period of 1933. Net sales totaled $1,640,664, compared with $644,628 a year ago, and President Howard I. Young said indications were that the second quarter would be "equally as good as the first."

American Commercial Alcohol Corporation had March quarter net profit of $690,387, equal to $2.65 a share, against $76,771, or 33 cents a share a year ago.

Quiet Period In Wool Goods Seen Ending

Buying Movement Expected Soon; Prices Decline 25 Cents to $2.

New York, April 27.—The long period of quiet in wool goods markets appears to be approaching an end, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service.

Buying of popular-priced men's suits and overcoats for fall at wholesale is expanding and is expected to lead to the placing of orders for piece goods soon. The new lines of clothing are attractively priced, ranging from 25 cents to $2 a garment below similar suits for spring.

The reductions are almost wholly due to reduction in piece goods prices resulting from the severe competition of the last ten weeks. Leading manufacturers of popular-priced clothes have already named prices for fall, and the market is no longer unsettled and confused.

To Tour Retail.

Clothing salesmen will begin initial tours of the retail trade next week. Meanwhile, a number of cutters are doing a brisk business on sports woolen suits which are now leading sellers from Coast to Coast.

"Prices on men's wear fabrics have apparently ended their decline," says the exchange service. "Concessions are reported here and there in the market, but when traced down are usually found to apply to seconds or discontinued styles.

"Sellers, however, are quite apprehensive over the weaknesses that have developed in wool and yarn markets, but they do not believe that a sharp break is likely to develop, although lack of demand has already forced prices down below cost levels.

In-Between Season.

"The women's wear field is in the middle of its in-between season with activity confined chiefly to white and check coatings and suitings for summer wear.

"Retailers have been very successful in promoting sales of wool yard goods, and the industry as a whole is expected to develop this outlet more fully next fall. Some of the new lines for fall have been shown quietly and have attracted much interest.

"Mills in many centers are curtailing production. Stocks of piece goods are very light. The demand for serges is disappointing, cloths of this type having apparently given way to 'styled' fabrics. Sales of wool underwear for fall continue well ahead of last year's totals."

Wool Prices Sag as Market Turns Heavier

Boston, April 27 (AP).—The Commercial Bulletin will say:

"Another exceedingly dull week has passed in the wool trade, with sales for the entire country hardly more than a half million pounds. It is calculated that the sales for the entire month of April will hardly exceed 33 per cent of a normal average weekly turnover. Prices naturally are sagging.

"The position of the mills is perhaps best illustrated by the statement of leading buyers that they are not interested in wool at the moment at any price. Spinners and combers are still 'sewed in' with large stocks of yarns and tops against which they are unable to get shipping orders.

"There is scattered buying in the Far West at about 10 cents, clean basis, under the earliest purchases on contract, but for the most part a deadlock exists. In the bright-wool States prices are lower, with buyers withdrawn on the basis of 28 cents to growers for medium wools.

"Foreign markets are dull and easier. There is a disposition to wait for London, where, it is expected, merinos will decline 5 to 7½ per cent from the previous sales and crossbreds 10 to 15 per cent.

"Mohair is quiet but steady."

The bulletin will publish the following quotations:

Domestic—Ohio and Pennsylvania fleeces: Delaine, unwashed, 32@34; ½ blood combing, 33@34; ⅜ blood combing, 36@37; ¼ blood combing, 35@36.

Michigan and New York fleeces: Delaine, unwashed, 30@32; ½ blood combing, 31@32; ⅜ blood combing, 36@37; ¼ blood combing, 35@36.

Wisconsin, Missouri and average Indiana and New England ½ blood combing, 30@31; ⅜ blood combing, 34@35 ¼ blood combing 33@44.

Crabbing Season Will Open May 1

Crisfield, Md., April 27 (Spl.). The crab season in Chesapeake Bay and all tributaries of Maryland will officially open on Tuesday, May 1. Local packers and catchers predict a very promising season.

Crabbers in this section and at other points along the Eastern Shore are unusually active getting their equipment into shape for the approaching season. Much of their equipment was badly damaged or destroyed in the violent storm of last August, and the crabbers have had more preparatory work to do this year than years previous. A large number of crab shantys have been built along the shores in this section this year.

Although the open season for crabs will begin the first of May, crabbers assert that good catches will not be possible until the latter part of that month. Ordinarily the crabbers can get started in earnest about May 15, but the cold weather of the past winter will delay the start somewhat this year.

Otis Elevator Sales Rise.

New York, April 27 (AP).—Sales of the Otis Elevator Co. in the first quarter were 65 per cent better than last year, J. H. Van Alstyne, president, said the second quarter should also show a gain.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For)

As the season of the Commissioner and Miscellaneous Ladies Bowling League, Internal Revenue, ended this week, the players elected a new set of officers with Miss Margaret Shannon as president. Miss Shannon, shown above, succeeds Mrs. Alberta M. Baudu.

ALTHOUGH other nominations were called for, members of the Adjutant General's Office Local, No. 372, N. F. F. E., accepted the report of the committee and nominated its selections throughout. Elections will be held at the May meeting.

BAKER.

Charles Kothe (*), Executive Division, heads the list as the nominee for president. Other nominations include:

Miss Grace E. Reardon, Enlisted Division, first vice president; Emory J. Tarr, Old Records, second vice president; Miss Marie Mazourek, Publications, third vice president; Alfred Harmon, Old Records, secretary-treasurer; Miss Beatrice C. Robertson, Publications, guardian; Harry W. Wanner, Executive Division; Samuel I. Snyder and John J. Crites were selected for the executive board.

Delegates nominated to the District Federation are Mr. Kothe, Louis A. Rosafy, Old Records; Miss Reardon, Harvey B. Gram, Selective Service; Mr. Harmon and Mr. Tarr. Alternates are Walter Keeton, Executive Division; Mrs. Viola C. Milne, Selective Service, and Mrs. Bertha D. Brown, Old Records.

The members indorse H. R. 9240, which would repeal section 213 of the legislative appropriation act (the marriage clause). Strong protest was filed at the nominating meeting against shortening of the 30-day leave.

Miss Mary Wilson, Identification Unit, Justice, who is recuperating from an appendectomy in the General Hospital at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., welcomed a group of fellow employes on a visit this week. Included in the party that drove up to see Miss Wilson were Miss Marie McCoy, Harold Durkin (*), and J. J. Ryan, all of Identification Unit.

Tugwell Will Speak.

An address on "Social Responsibility of Technical Workers" by Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, will be given Tuesday night under auspices of the Association of Professional and Technical Employes, A. F. G. E., P. H. Groggins, president, announces.

The program will begin at 8:15 o'clock in the auditorium of the National Museum. The meeting will be a joint affair with Agriculture Branch of Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes, of which A. C. Edwards is president.

Limericks a la Chaz.

The trainmen throughout California
Wave lanterns at crossings to wornia
That if you drive fast,
The trains going past
With wreckage are apt to adornia.
A nice young man from Indiana
Was quite good a playing piana.
It was just his voice
That toined out a coise
Because it gave forth a soprana.
—A. Chasanow (*), Navy.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary Editor the same day. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, "Fifty Million Frenchmen;" screen John Boles in "Bottoms Up"); or to Loew's Palace (second week of "Tarzan and his Mate" with Johnny Weismuller); or to Loew's Columbia (Clark Gable and Myrna Loy in "Men in White").

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sunday, 12 m. to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m. Saturday, 12 m. to 2:30 p. m.

Clark Jo Blo says every fellow needs a background, but he can't get anywhere by sticking in it.

A method for electroplating interior curved surfaces, such as the bore of a gun, has been perfected and patented by Edwin M. Crouch, Navy. The plating takes place progressively by means of an anode moving at a given rate along the bore of the gun.

Postettes.

Miss Gertrude Coyle, Quartermaster General, War, will be hostess Monday night at a card party of Local No. 261, N. F. F. E., at the Carlton Hotel.

Max Frank, General Accounting Office, has just survived an operation after an acute attack of appendicitis. He will spend his convalesence at his home in Worcester, Mass.

Albert F. Schoepper (*), Marine Corps, won a huge ovation with his concerto in D for violin and orchestra at the Marine Band concert at the Barracks this week. He is one of the youngest members of the band.

Earl Vincent, Postoffice, has returned from a visit to Syracuse, N. Y.

F. E. Early, Bureau of Formal Cases, Interstate Commerce Commission, is back at his desk after a three weeks' trip to Tampa, Fla., with an enviable coat of tan.

Edward J. Budjako, Special Advisory Committee, Internal Revenue, is in Cincinnati on a six weeks' business trip.

Mrs. Evangeline Thurber, Catalogue Division, Library of Congress, has returned to work after being confined to her home by illness.

Today's Epitaph.

A gambler rests beneath these stones;
Gambling was his only vice.
Oh, how he liked to roll the bones—
Perhaps he's gone to pair o' dice.

Virginia's Liquor Operators Unite

Aim to Place Business "On a High Plane."

Richmond, April 27 (Spl.).—Virginia's liquor salesmen and distributers have banded together as the Virginia Licensees Association for the purpose of "placing their business on a high plane and cooperating with the alcoholic beverage control board to get rid of the illegal traffickers."

The organization is made up of retailers, hotel and club managers and distributing agents. Most of the 120 licensees already given permits here are members.

Nimmo Old is president, John Morris vice president, and Walter Coulter treasurer. A paid secretary will be employed. A committee will be maintained to see that members obey the laws of the State and regulations of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Virginia Colleges Start PWA Work

Col. J.A. Anderson Reports Six Projects Begun.

Richmond, April 27 (AP).—Actual work is now in progress on six PWA projects at Virginia State institutions of higher learning, Col. James A. Anderson, State PWA engineer, said today.

In addition, preliminary work on the site for the new engineering building for the University of Virginia is being accomplished, preparatory to construction work later, at approximate cost of $372,000.

The projects under construction are dining hall for East Radford State Teachers College, dormitory for Harrisonburg State Teachers College, swimming pool for Farmville State Teachers College, first unit of a dormitory for Fredericksburg State Teachers College, buildings for the Virginia State Teachers College at Petersburg, and an art museum for the University of Virginia.

Jackson Creek Channel Dredging Is Urged

Improvements in Jackson Creek, Va., at a cost of $11,800 and annual maintenance of $800 was recommended to the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors in a report submitted yesterday by Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham, Chief of Army Engineers, according to the Associated Press.

Markham recommends dredging a channel 8 feet deep and 60 feet wide, increased to 80 feet at the outer end, and generally following the present channel.

School to Graduate 26.

Moorefield, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.). The sixteenth annual graduation exercises of Moorefield High School will be held June 1, when 26 graduates will receive diplomas.

Police Radio Plans Dropped.

Charleston, W. Va., April 27 (Spl.).—Because it has been deemed both confusing and expensive, plans to furnish the West Virginia State police with radio equipment have been abandoned.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, the popularity of prizefighting in Ireland, where men are noted for fighting, was brought about in the late eighteenth century, largely through the efforts of Daniel Mendoza, a fighter of Jewish descent.

Mendoza, who is regarded by some authorities on pugilistic history as the father of scientific boxing, appeared in Ireland in 1791, on tour with Astey's circus. When he arrived in Dublin, he opened a boxing school, which accounted largely for the sudden increase in interest in boxing in Ireland. Many of the "fighting Irish" of the ring took their first lessons under the direction of Mendoza, and in his school.

Arthur Haufe used Corticelli machine twist B thread and a very large needle when he set out to establish an unbeatable needle-threading record. At first he put 400 threads through, 200 at a time, then 250 more in one group of 100 and three groups of 50 each. The last 140 threads were put through the needle in pairs.

Walt Mason, Himself

Time Passes.

Father Time is blithely hopping, all his cylinders in gear; soon we'll do our Christmas shopping, soon we'll greet the glad New Year. Yesterday the bells were ringing as we did our Yuletide chores; yesterday you saw us bringing Christmas presents from the stores. Now the brand-new year is shorter by three months than at its start; it's diminished by a quarter, and it breaks an old man's heart. For the way old Time is speeding fills his weary soul with gloom, as he knows you'll soon be reading epitaphs upon his tomb. To the young the weeks are dragging, toiling on with languid step; and the days are loafing, lagging, with no sign of vim or pep. Forward youth is ever gazing, to the triumphs he will know; Hail Columbia he's raising, since Time seems so beastly slow. Father Time should be a sprinter, down his course he ought to swing; summer should collide with winter, autumn kick the heels of spring. Father Time seems always busy to the old gents by the way, and his speed curves make them dizzy, as they watch him day by day. We can hear the old men yawping as they journey down the glen, "We've just finished Christmas shopping, and it's time to start again."

WE CERTAINLY WERE DIZZY TO HIRE AN OFFICE WITH A LOCKED SAFE IN IT.
EVERYBODY MAKES MISTAKES. THAT'S WHY A DETECTIVE ALWAYS SEES SOMETHING AT THE SCENE OF A CRIME THAT IS JUST TOO BAD FOR SOME ALLEGEDLY INNOCENT PARTY.
DID YOU TAKE ANY LESSONS ON OPENING SAFES FROM THOSE DETECTIVE ACADEMIES, HERMAN?
A LITTLE. BUT MY MAIN SPECIALTY WAS.... OH OH... WHO'S THIS GETTING OUT OF A RITZY BIG CAR WITH AN OLD GENT?
WHY IT'S MRS. DARDANELLA. I WONDER..?
SHE SAID SHE'D DROP IN ON US, GEORGE, THAT MAN WITH HER MAY BE A CUSTOMER.... LET'S LOOK BUSY..... I'LL BE WRITING A REPORT.... YOU CAN... LET ME SEE.. YOU CAN BE CLOSING THE SAFE WHEN THEY WALK IN.

YES, AND WE ALSO GOT EVERYONE ON HIS LIST!
GOOD!
AND I GOT ORDERS TO SHIP YOU BACK TO THE CAPITOL, DEAD OR ALIVE!!
OH YES??
WELL, I DON'T NEED TO BE SHIPPED BACK—I'M GOING BACK ON MY OWN TWO FEET VERY MUCH ALIVE!!
'ATTA GIRL!
